"Ash Wednesday"

Damage to the fashionable North End of Virginia Beach was in the millions of dollars following the devastating "Ash Wednesday" storm of 1962.

Hurricane awareness may prevent disaster

By Samuel Martinette, Jr.
Editor

Hurricane! The very word can set the blood racing. Often called the greatest storm on earth, each year an average of 50 lives are lost to its swirling winds, heavy rains and violent floods. Along the Atlantic and Gulf coastal areas more than $100 million dollars worth of damage is done to property during an average season.

Hurricane Donna

Virginia Beach has not been hit by a major hurricane since 1960 when Hurricane Donna swept through with winds reaching 94 miles per hour. The storm killed over 100 people nationwide, but Beach residents were buttoned up tight and weathered the buffeting winds.

Crowds milled about the Dome and more than a thousand soldiers and civilians were evacuated from Fort Story. In those days the Chesapeake Lightship was anchored off the entrance to the Bay, and she recorded winds of 138 miles per hour just after the eye of the storm passed the coast.

Ash Wednesday

Two years later a violent wind package which came to be called the "Ash Wednesday" storm arrived in Virginia Beach. On Wednesday, March 7, 1962 vicious winds and pounding surf breached the boardwalk and washed away more than 400 feet of the old fishing pier. Cottages and summer homes at Sandbridge were destroyed and much of the oceanfront was flooded.

Some looting was reported and Mayor Frank A. Dusch asked for aid from the National Guard. Army patrols were instituted and amphibious DUKWs rescued stranded homeowners isolated in small pockets all over the city. And the Ash Wednesday storm was not as fearful as the great storm of 1933, by which all flood marks are gauged.

"We don't want to be in the position of the boy who cried wolf so often that no one listened," explained R. Lee Eskey during a recent interview. Eskey is the city's Emergency Services Coordinator.

"But it's a fact that it has been over 22 years since the last major storm hit the Beach and during that time the city has grown from a combined population for Prin-

J. Wylie French

French joins TCC board

George Pass, president of Tidewater Community College, announced that J. Wylie French has been elected chairman of the TCC Board. Lionel W. Brookins of Chesapeake has been elected vice chairman, and Ada R. Michaels of Norfolk, treasurer.

French is a resident of Virginia Beach and principal of Green Run High School. He has been a member of the Virginia Beach school system since 1961, and taught in the Princess Anne County school system from 1958 until 1961.

French was appointed to the TCC Board by the city of Virginia Beach in 1978 and has served as treasurer and vice chairman as well as chairman of the board's Building and Site Committee.

The TCC board consists of twelve members, with three members appointed by each of the city councils of Chesapeake, Norfolk, Portsmouth, and Virginia Beach. The other two members of the board from the city of Virginia Beach are Richard D. Guy and Robert T. Mosby.

In making the announcement, Pass stated that he is looking forward to working closely with the newly elected officers. He indicated that the officers are uniquely qualified to work with the College as it responds to the educational needs of the people it serves.

Poison center advises jellyfish sting treatment

The Tidewater Poison Center, located at DePaul Hospital, recently issued guidelines for consumer treatment of jellyfish stings. The center has recognized an increase in the number of jellyfish sting reports in the past two weeks. Craig Snyder, center coordinator, stated: "We are receiving about five calls each day reporting jellyfish stings. In addition we have received two reports of Sting Ray stings, one in Virginia Beach and one on the Eastern Shore." Snyder warned "Although the typical jellyfish sting can be safely treated at home, some stings can be serious, such as rash, swelling (usually of the hands, feet, or face), chest tightness, or difficulty breathing, should be treated by health care professionals. In addition, Sting Ray attacks should be treated at a health care facility." The Poison Center recommended

Four from Beach to attend ODU

Norfolk -- Ten area rising eighth graders have been selected to attend Old Dominion University through a gifted and talented program administered by Johns Hopkins University.

The scholarships allow each student to attend one academic course at ODU during the next year. ODU counselors are working with the students to determine which course is best suited to their interests, abilities, and schedules.

The students were nominated by their schools, and selection was based on Scholastic Aptitude Test scores.

Administered through Johns Hopkins' Center for Advancement of Academically Talented Youth, the program selects exceptional students to attend colleges and universities across the country. As with other institutions, ODU funds the scholarships.

Students who were selected to attend ODU are Catherine M. Burkhardt and Elinor H. Buxton of Virginia Beach, Michael L. Frapp of Williamsburg, Catherine A. Lawrence of Virginia Beach, Edward S. Merry of Newport News, Elizabeth C. Minor of Franklin, Aaron J. Mansheim of Norfolk, Meredith L. Quigley of Virginia Beach, Lisa G. Rosenthal of Norfolk and Brian R. West of Williamsburg.

Voters should make necessary changes

All citizens are encouraged to exercise their right to vote in the upcoming presidential election, but certain regulations may prevent some people from doing so. Virginia Beach Voter Registrar, Dr. Marlene Hager, recently reminded citizens that changes of address and name changes must be registered with the Voter Registrar's office. Changes can be made by mail and should be done early.

Some changes can be made at the polls, but this causes confusion and delays. Also, if a voter moved from one precinct to another before the last general election in November of 1983, and did not notify the General Registrar of the change of address, that voter will not be allowed to vote in the former precinct.

In addition, if a registered voter has not voted at least one time in the last four years, their name has been removed from the books and they will need to register again (voting in the 1980 Presidential Election does count). The deadline for voter registration is Saturday, October 6.

To register to vote in Virginia Beach, residents must complete an application at the Voter Registrar's Office or at one of the eleven Assistant Registrar locations in Virginia Beach. Registration can also be done at one of the special voter registration drives being held in local supermarkets and malls.

To learn the location of the Assistant Registrars and the Special Drives or for further general information, Beach people should contact the General Registrar's Office at 427-4667.

The new suicide

In this modern day of group therapy and group sex one might seem old fashioned to express alarm at the newest form of group activity...group suicide.

Weekly now we are horrified with media reports of alienated loners blasting their names into our consciousness with a hideous litany of death and destruction. Today the norm seems to be that whenever some poor lost soul feels the future is too dim to go on, he or she is compelled to make a final statement, a last will and testament of misery and shame.

Are we such a distressed society that the only way some can make their mark is to tell their neighbor's child with a bullet? Is it the fault of our moral structure or the mass media for showing the other monkey-see idiots out there that a quick way to fame is murder, even if at the cost of their own lives?

Three episodes within the last month have sickened the hearts of most Americans. There have been shootings in California and Arkansas and a mad driver run amuck in Los Angeles, leaving nearly thirty dead and a hundred wounded. People are buying more guns and more ammunition. There is a war going on out there and a constant fear is that no one is winning.

Will they ever return?

Not long ago an article appeared in the Virginian-Pilot stating the fact that Tidewater Regional Transit would soon begin requiring urinalysis testing among the women and men who pilot their fleet of buses. Doubtless, that announcement causes unease among bus driving civil libertarians and would lead one to question whether big brother will be driving our mass transit commuters to and from their appointed destinations.

Is this a needless violation of the rights of hard-working men and women who are simply trying to earn a living? Or have we been risking our lives all along among the stoned-out, alcohol-maddened minions of TRT? Either prospect is disheartening and casts no credit on the transit company. Where will it stop?

No wonder poor Charlie never returned from his fateful trip on the MTA.

Ray who?

As if we don't have enough to worry about already, the radon scare is now upon us.

Old Paul Harvey has been babbling about the evils of radon for the last couple of months or so, but with him you can't always tell the news from the roach powder commercials, so few of us paid any attention.

But now further word on radon comes to us from an almost unimpeachable source—the folks at the Virginia Tech College of Architecture.

It seems that Paul was right. Radon, the folks at Tech explain, is a radioactive gas that is present in most soil, rocks, mineral deposits and materials made from these substances.

Radon decays to produce other radioactive elements—or radon progeny—which emit a form of radiation that can when inhaled, damage tissue in the respiratory tract.

Now in a lot of houses, especially well-ventilated ones, the radon level probably doesn't build up into any kind of threat.

That's the good news. But in older houses and new energy efficient homes which allow longer retention of heat than conventional buildings, radon could be a very serious problem.

VPI architecture Professor Robert P. Schubert is examining the extent a radon retention in energy efficient homes by using sensors that measure the concentration of the gas in the air, near water sources and in the outside soil at the foundation.

For these many years we thought all that lurked in those cellars and crawl spaces were mice, spiders and the bogymen.

A new direction in photography

In Photography, what you see, is what you get -- or is it? In the case of Hil Scott and Tim Close, the answer is "not always." Scott and Close are the featured artists in a new direction color photography exhibit on display at the Virginia Beach Arts Center. The exhibit entitled "Changing Color: The Manipulated Environment in Photography," will continue at the Arts Center through August 20.

Hil Scott, of Richmond, is currently an instructor of photography at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts. He received a bachelor of arts degree from Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, and a master of fine arts in photography from Rochester Institute of Technology in Rochester, New York.

Scott, who works with Polaroid images usually associated with the "Snapshot," will present photographs representative of a body of work begun in September 1981. They are fabrications, and the work is both selective and participatory.

In a series of 4"x5" prints, made using a 4"x5" view camera and Polaroid ER type 59 Land film, something has been added to each scene prior to the final exposure. In some images, for instance, the additions are simply bits and pieces of color, paper or wire. In other images, the items introduced are more literal, such as masks or arrows.

In a series of smaller prints, produced using a Polaroid SX-70 camera and its corresponding "Time Zero" Land film, changes in the original images have been obtained somewhat differently. The subject matter in the print has been physically manipulated with a burnishing tool while the dyes were still soft and malleable.

In regards to his work, Scott explains, "In each image in each series, the changes or additions, however literal, serve to articulate or elaborate on the spatial relationships, forms and colors already present."

Tim Close, a native of Virginia Beach, has been living and working in Los Angeles for the past five years. He received a bachelor of fine arts from Arizona State University at Tempe, Arizona, and a master of fine arts from California Institute of the Arts at Valencia, California.

Close will be exhibiting numerous large-scale color photos taken from his current body of work, "Environment/AntiEnvironment," which he began in 1982. Approximately 25 works from this series, most measuring 16" x 20", will be on view.

To produce all the works in this series, Close took a camera and a can of spray paint to construction sites where he would encounter an environment, then proceed to rearrange and manipulate it. "I go in there with an

What's to read on the beach

Books

By Toni Lehmann

Adolph Eichmann, written by his son's college professor.

No one seemed very interested in any of the "mind improving" classics which are often thought of as appropriate for summer-time reading. Then I came across a fifteen-year-old boy from New Jersey, who asked not to be identified, who was deep into Catcher in the Rye by J. D. Salinger. I was impressed by his wise use of time at the beach and asked if he was reading it for a school assignment. He replied no, he had seen it listed in The Preppy Handbook.

Most people, it seems, choose their beach reading purely for fun, but many take great care in selecting the ideal book to bring along on a vacation. Lisa Sheard, of Toronto, Ontario had been saving Sidney Sheldon's Rage of Angels specifically for this occasion. Jim Flanagan, a mystery fan from Greenwich, Connecticut, had gone to the library just before leaving and picked out Mayday in Magadan by Anthony Olcott, one of his favorite authors.

Others are not as concerned with what they read at the beach, as long as they have a book, any book. Final Reflection, a science fiction novel by John M. Ford, was the choice of John Wozniak of Wilmington, Delaware. He just happened to be reading it when he began his vacation and like many others, brought it along. Juanita Gaspich of Frederick, Maryland, also tries to read on vacation. She chose Sirens, by Eric Van Lustbader "because it was on sale at the grocery store."

Surprisingly, there were not really a great many people with books at the beach, so I was intrigued when I saw a row of five people, four of whom were reading. I found they were all students from Ireland, working in Virginia Beach for the summer. Noirin Wingfield, Rita Shirley, Mark Loneragan and Breda Curtin, were trading various paperbacks among themselves, including James

Visual signals

Last time we talked about emergency repairs afloat. This time your problems are more serious. Your boat has no power and you are stranded. Being a prudent boater, you have set your anchor so your boat will not drift out to sea. You try to radio for help but your radio doesn't work because your boat's electrical system is dead too. There is another boat way out on the horizon but he doesn't see you or hear you. What do you do now?

One of the corner stones of the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary is their annual Courtesy Marine Examination of safety equipment on recreational boats. The exam is free to the public and is designed to increase the safety of recreational boating by encouraging adherence to higher standards than those achieved by compliance with federal boating regulations. This year more boats have failed the exam because of the Visual Distress Signals (VDS) requirements.

The federal regulations state that no person may use a boat 16 feet or more in length or any boat carrying six or less passengers unless visual distress signals in the number required are on board. Devices suitable for day use and devices suitable for night use, or devices suitable for both day and night use must be carried. Between sunset and sunrise, no person may use a boat less than 16 feet in length unless VDS devices suitable for night use, in the number required, are on board.

The reason for failure is that most boaters are not aware of the expiration date marked on all approved type signaling devices. The serviceable life of current signals is 42 months from the date of manufacture. The type device determines the number that is required to be carried on board.

Here are some descriptions of different types of Visual Distress signaling devices and the minimum required number that you must have on board: hand-held flare for day or night use - three required; hand-held orange smoke for day use only - three required; hand-held parachute flare for day or night use - three required; pistol parachute flare for day or night use - three shells required; red aerial pyrotechnic flare for day use only - three required; orange flag for day use only - one required; electric distress light for night use only - one required. Flashing lights should only be used as authorized in the Navigational Rules in order to avoid confusion with the authorized distress signals. Strobe lights may only be used as a distress signal.

I must advise you that any pyrotechnic signaling device can be dangerous if used improperly or carelessly. Read the instructions on the device beforehand. When using pyrotechnic signaling devices, stand upwind of the device pointing it away from the body when operating and hold it over the water. Since these devices have been known to misfire, protect the eyes when operating the unit. Devices which fail to operate or are expended should be quickly disposed of overboard and well away from the boat.

The visual distress signaling are prohibited in their use. No person in a boat should display a visual distress signal on the water under any circumstance except a situation where assistance is needed because of the immediate or potential danger to the person on board. Not only are you falsely giving a distress signal for help (a false alarm) but you could be placing other boats and persons in potential danger.

The pamphlets Visual Distress Signals (CG12) provides simple and non-technical information on distress signals, how to use them, how to recognize them. You can obtain a copy by writing to the Commander, 5th Coast Guard District (8), Federal Bldg., 431 Crawford St., Portsmouth, VA 23705.

HURRICANE SURVIVAL CHECKLIST

THE GREATEST STORM ON EARTH

The hurricane is a large circular storm of awful violence. Winds in the storm reach at least 74 miles an hour or greater, and may gust as high as 200 miles an hour. On the average, its great spiral clouds cover an area several hundred miles in diameter. The spirals are heavy cloud bands from which torrential rains fall. They are separated by areas of light rain or no rain at all. Tornado activity may be generated in these spiral cloud bands.

Hurricanes may move quite erratically. They can suddenly change direction, make loops, slow up or stop - and later on move at 10 to 20 miles an hour. Some hurricanes along the mid-Atlantic and New England coasts move at more than 30 miles an hour.

The hurricane's eye is unique, as no other atmospheric phenomenon has a center almost free of clouds, with very light winds and warm temperatures surrounded by a doughnut shaped area of maximum winds. On the average eye diameter is about 25 miles although diameters of 50 miles are not unusual.

The destruction caused by these giant storms is legend. The death and damage is caused by wind, flood-produced rains, and, most lethal of all, the storm surge.

VIRGINIA'S VULNERABILITY

Virginia's coastal zone including offshore islands, Chesapeake Bay and Atlantic Ocean shoreline is 3,315 miles in length. Two hundred and ninety-four (294) miles of this is classified as beach. The coastal zone is inhabited by 3,028,150 people, or 67% of the State's total population. Population growth in this area is one and one-half times faster than the State average. Summer tourists add another dimension. For example, during a summer weekend the number of visitors at Virginia Beach will increase the normal population by more than 50,000.

During the last 15 years, the major hurricanes have occurred in the states along the Gulf of Mexico. It has been 15 years since residents of the eastern seaboard have experienced a major hurricane. This pattern could be reversed at anytime and the coastal areas of the State are potentially vulnerable. Considering the unpredictable nature of these great storms, it can be said that the Virginia coast is past due.

The information in this brochure is provided as a public service. Its purpose is to increase hurricane awareness. The key to survival disaster preparation. This is a joint effort by the Virginia Office of Emergency Services and local governments.

BEFORE A HURRICANE YOU SHOULD KNOW

ELEVATION OF YOUR HOME ABOVE SEA LEVEL

Get this information from local Emergency Services officials. Your nearest Weather Service office can supply floodstage data for area streams and bayous.

MAXIMUM STORM SURGE WHICH MIGHT OCCUR

Information about the potential for inland flooding and storm surge is available through the nearest Weather Service office.

ROUTE TO SAFETY IF YOU HAVE TO LEAVE

Plan your escape route early. Check with local Emergency Services for low points and flooding history of your route.

LOCATION OF NEAREST OFFICIAL SHELTER

Local Emergency Services or Red Cross can locate the shelter nearest your home and explain what you should bring with you.

HOW SAFE YOUR HOME IS

Near the seashore, plan to relocate during a hurricane emergency unless you live in a high-rise above the third floor level. If you live in a mobile home, always plan to relocate.

THE INVENTORY OF YOUR PROPERTY

A complete inventory of personal property will help in obtaining insurance settlements and/or tax deductions for losses. Inventory check-lists can be obtained from many sources, including your insurance representative. Don't trust your memory. List descriptions and take pictures. Store these and other important insurance papers in waterproof containers or in your safety deposit box.

WHAT YOUR INSURANCE WILL COVER

Review your insurance policies to avoid misunderstanding later. Take advantage of flood insurance. Separate policies are needed for protection against wind and water damage, which people frequently don't realize until too late.

IMPORTANT: Do not wait until a hurricane is near shore - by then, it's too late. When a storm is heading to shore, officials are too busy preparing for the emergency and won't be able to respond to individual requests, and insurance can't be obtained.

WHEN A WATCH IS ISSUED, CHECK SUPPLIES

TRANSISTOR RADIO WITH FRESH BATTERIES

Radio will be your most useful information source. Have enough batteries to last several days. There may be no electricity.

FLASHLIGHTS, CANDLES OR LAMPS, MATCHES

FULL TANK OF GASOLINE

Never let your vehicle gas tank be less than half-full during hurricane season: fill up as soon as a hurricane watch is posted. Remember: when there is no electricity, gas pumps won't work.

CANNED GOODS AND NON-PERISHABLE FOODS

Store packaged foods which can be prepared without cooking and need not refrigeration. There may be no electricity or gas.

CONTAINERS FOR DRINKING WATER

Have clean, air-tight containers to store sufficient drinking water for several days. The city supply will probably be interrupted or contaminated.

MATERIALS FOR PROTECTING GLASS OPENINGS

Have shutters or lumber for protecting large windows and doors and making tape for use on small windows.

MATERIALS FOR EMERGENCY REPAIRS

Your insurance policy may cover cost of materials used in temporary repairs, so keep all receipts. These will also be helpful for any income tax deductions.

WHEN A WARNING IS ISSUED, ACT PROMPTLY

LISTEN CONSTANTLY TO RADIO OR TV

Keep a log of hurricane position, intensity and expected landfall. Discount rumors. Use telephone sparingly.

IF YOU LIVE IN A MOBILE HOME

Check tie-downs and leave immediately for a safer place.

PREPARE FOR HIGH WINDS

ANCHOR OBJECTS OUTSIDE

Garbage cans, awnings, loose garden tools, toys and other loose objects can be deadly missiles. Anchor securely or bring indoors.

PROTECT WINDOWS AND OTHER GLASS

Board up or shutter large windows securely. Tape exposed glass to reduce shattering. Draw drapes across windows and doors to protect against flying glass if shattering does occur.

MOVE BOATS ON TRAILERS CLOSE TO HOUSE

Fill boats with water to weight them down. Lash securely to trailer and use tie-downs to anchor trailer to the ground or house.

CHECK MOORING LINES OR BOATS IN WATER, THEN LEAVE THEM

STORE VALUABLES AND PERSONAL PAPERS

PREPARE FOR TORNADOES AND FLOODS

Tornadoes and flash floods are the worst killers associated with a hurricane. In a tornado warning, seek inside shelter below ground level. If outside, move away at right angles from tornado. If escape is impossible, lie flat in a ditch or low spot. The surge of ocean water plus flash flooding of streams and rivers due to torrential rains, combine to make drowning the greatest cause of hurricane deaths.

CHECK YOUR SURVIVAL SUPPLIES ONCE AGAIN

STAY INDOORS

Don't go out in the brief calm during passage of the eye of the storm. The lull sometimes ends suddenly as winds return from the opposite direction. Winds can increase in seconds to 75 m.p.h. or more.

PROTECT PROPERTY

STAY AWAY FROM WINDOWS AND GLASS DOORS

Move furniture away from exposed doors and windows.

STAY ON LEeward OR DOWNWIND SIDE OF HOUSE

As wind direction changes, move to another room. If your home has an "inside" room, stay there during the height of the hurricane.

KEEP A CONTINUOUS COMMUNICATIONS WATCH

REMAIN CALM

Your ability to meet emergencies will help others.

IF YOU MUST RE-LOCATE

BE CERTAIN THERE IS A SAFE REFUGE TO ACCOMMODATE YOU - LEAVE EARLY IN DAYLIGHT IF POSSIBLE

Dangerous winds and tides may arrive three to five hours before the hurricane.

DON'T TRAVEL FARTHER THAN NECESSARY

LOCK WINDOWS AND DOORS

Check to see that you have done everything to protect your property from damage and loss.

CARRY ALONG SURVIVAL SUPPLIES

- First aid kit
- Canned or dried provisions, can opener, spoons, etc.
- Bottled water
- Extra family medication
- Spare eyeglasses, hearing aid and batteries, if required.
- Property inventory
- Medic-aid or device to convey special medical information.

TAKE WARM, PROTECTIVE CLOTHING

BEWARE OF OUTDOOR HAZARDS

Watch out for loose or dangling power lines, and report them immediately, to proper authority. Many lives are lost by electrocution.

WALK OR DRIVE CAUTIOUSLY

Debris-filled streets are dangerous. Snakes and poisonous insects will be a hazard. Watchouts may weaken road and bridge structures which could collapse under vehicle weight.

GUARD AGAINST SPOILED FOOD

Food may spoil if refrigerator power is off more than a few hours. Freezers will keep food several days if doors are not opened after power failure, but do not freeze food once it begins to thaw.

DO NOT USE WATER UNTIL SAFE

Use your emergency supply or boil water before drinking until official word that the water is safe. Report broken sewer or water mains to proper authority.

TAKE EXTRA PRECAUTIONS TO PREVENT FIRE

Lowered water pressure in city mains and the interruption of other services may make firefighting extremely difficult after a hurricane.

NOW, THE CLEAN-UP

NOTIFY YOUR INSURANCE REPRESENTATIVE

Insurance representatives will be on the scene immediately following a major disaster to speed up the handling of claims. Notify your insurance representative of any losses - leave word where you can be contacted.

TAKE STEPS TO PROTECT PROPERTY

Make temporary repairs to protect property from further damage or looting. Use only reputable contractors (sometimes in the chaotic days following a disaster, unscrupulous operators will prey on the unsuspecting) - check the Better Business Bureau. Keep all receipts for materials used.

BE PATIENT

Hardship cases will be settled first by insurance representatives. Don't assume your settlement will be the same as your neighbor's. Policy forms differ and storm damage is often erratic. In a major catastrophe, the insurance industry will have emergency offices and extra manpower to expedite claim settlements and to speed recovery.

IT TAKES A TEAM EFFORT

Responsibility for the clean-up falls to numerous local, state and federal agencies. A local Emergency Services coordinator/director will be on hand to help residents in this effort.

HOW TO TRACK A HURRICANE

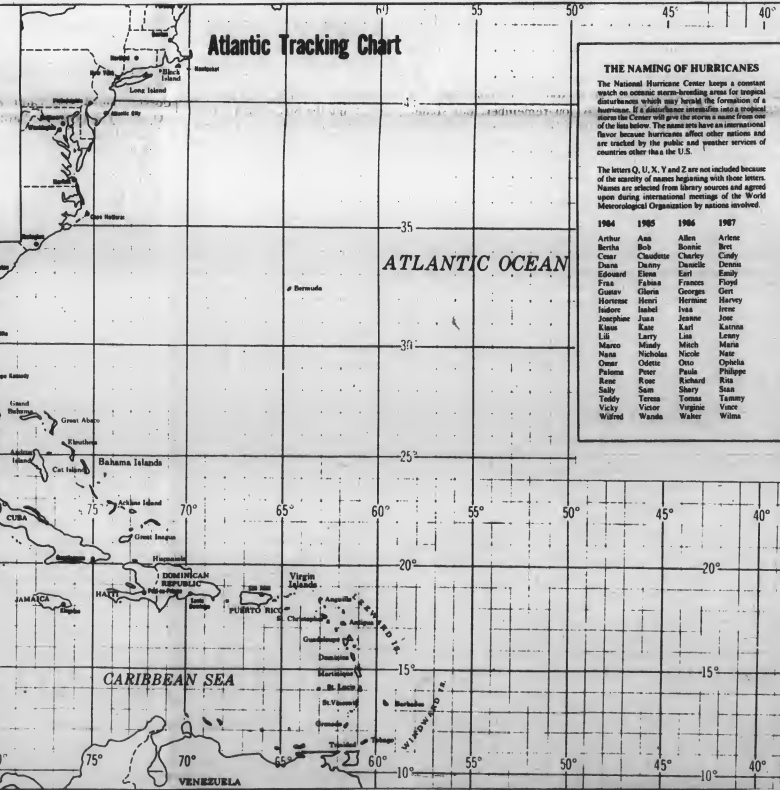

Advisories are numbered consecutively for each storm, and describe the present and forecast position and intensity of the storm. Tropical cyclone advisories are issued at six-hour intervals - at midnight, 6 a.m., noon, and 6 p.m., Eastern Daylight Time. Bulletins provide additional information. Each message gives the name, eye position, intensity, and forecast movement of the tropical cyclone.

Hurricane eye positions are given by latitude (for example, 13.2 degrees North) and longitude (for example, 57.8 degrees West), to the nearest one-tenth of one degree. When the storm moves within range of the radar fence eye position may also be given as statute miles and compass direction from a specified point.

When you receive a tropical cyclone advisory, note the advisory number, eye position, intensity, and forecast direction of movement in the table at right. Then mark the eye position on the tracking chart. Because hurricanes change direction very quickly, you should concentrate more on where the storm will go than where it has been.

*Tropical cyclones are not given names until they reach the storm stage that is, closed low, rotary circulation, and winds over 39 miles per hour (34 knots).

THE NAMING OF HURRICANES

The National Hurricane Center keeps a constant watch on oceanic storm-building areas for tropical disturbances which may become hurricanes. It is the duty of the Center to give the names to these storms. The names are taken from a list of names which are used in alphabetical order. Names are selected from literary sources and agreed upon during international meetings of the World Meteorological Organization by nations involved.

The letters Q, U, X, Y and Z are not included because of the scarcity of names beginning with these letters.

Ann County and Virginia Beach that only reached 85,000 with 25,000 residential structures. Today," Eskey said, "we have 118,000 residential structures and over 311,000 permanent population.

"And over a long summer weekend there could well be an additional 75,000 visitors. Add to that the fact that many of our newer residents have never been through a storm and you end up with apathy, inexperience and a false sense of security.

"Now I don't want to scare people into leaving their homes if they feel safe," Eskey said. "But they have to be prepared to lose telephone service and in some cases contact with the outside world for a time."

Senior citizens who live alone and those with special medical needs should take steps in advance of any storm warning to evacuate or prepare themselves should they find themselves isolated, Eskey said.

"The National Weather Service feels like the potential is greater this year," Eskey replied, when asked if a storm threat is predicted this summer for the Atlantic coast. The hurricane season covers a six month period from June 1 until November 30; however, most Atlantic coast hurricanes occur in August, September and October.

"Any storm that hit us would be mainly dangerous to those who live in the coastal areas," Eskey continued. "Pounding surf and high winds, accompanied by a surging water height is the main problem for those in low-lying areas of the city. For that reason we have arranged shelters located throughout Virginia Beach that would be capable of temporarily housing many of those who would have to leave their homes.

"Without trying to scare anyone," Eskey said, "I must remind our populace that the hurricane of 1933, the one against which we measure all of our records, was only a Category II. They are categorized up to five! The storm that set our records was not even a major storm."

Editor's Note: Both the Sun and the Office and Emergency Services are interested in obtaining photos of Virginia Beach during and after the Hurricanes of 1933, 1962 (Hurricane Donna) and the Ash Wednesday Storm. Drop us a line if you think you may have some photos that would add to the preservation of a part of Virginia's Beach history.

Increase in homeownership drops

Real Estate
By Roger Pyle

An affordability crisis over the past three years has dropped the increase in American homeownership to less than half of what it was during the 1970's, according to a United States League of Savings Institutions representative.

At the American Land Title Association annual convention, Theo H. Pitt Jr., vice chairman of the League's Home Ownership Task Force, said the decline in percentage of American households owning homes is the first in 40 years and is likely to continue.

Pitt, who is president of Home Savings and Loan Association, Rocky Mount, N.C., said a major reason for the problem is that people saving money and adding to capital for housing finance are being outnumbered by people wanting to borrow.

TCC credits life experience

Under a new program at the Virginia Beach Campus of Tidewater Community College, it is now possible to receive college credit for lifelong learning experiences. Persons enrolled in a course called "Portfolio Development" can apply for credit for what they have learned in work and volunteer service, conferences and workshops, independent reading, homemaking and child rearing, military service, travel, or business.

Portfolio Development was offered as a pilot course last spring and will be offered on a permanent basis beginning this fall quarter. According to instructor Barbara Beougher, the course encourages persons to launch a college career by showing them how much they already know.

"Many people don't want to waste time in class learning what they already know," said Beougher. "This is a way for the college to acknowledge their college-level skills. It gives older students, especially, a 'head start' on their education by assessing what they have already learned, and transforming it into college credit."

The non-traditional method of earning credit is also economical. Currently, the student pays tuition for the 3-credit class only, and the evaluation and subsequent credit is free of charge. Tuition for a 3-credit course, for residents of Virginia is $45.75.

In addition to help in preparing the portfolio—the documentation of prior learning—the student receives help with career planning, and a chance to reflect on his life and how much he has accomplished. For more information, Beach people should contact the Cooperative Education Office, 427-3070, extension 237.

the following treatment for Jellyfish stings:

1. Immediately irrigate the sting with salt water.
2. Carefully remove tentacles, using a towel to protect the hands. As long as the tentacle remains on the skin, it will continue to sting the victim. In fact, tentacles of a dead Jellyfish can sting.
3. Do not rub the area.
4. Apply a solution of household ammonia, diluted 1:10 in water, to relieve pain. Alternative treatments include meat tenderizer and baking soda.
5. Any signs of allergic reaction, chest tightness, difficulty breathing, or infection should be treated by a health care professional. The treatment for Sting Ray stings is different and should be treated in a health care facility. These are recognized as puncture wounds or lacerations (usually of the feet or legs) rather than redness and swelling.

idea and make my own environment, which counteracts the existing environment," he said, explaining the title of the works.

Structurally reminiscent of cubist painting, Close's photographic environments are reconstructed almost entirely from materials found on the construction site. The subject, however, is not construction sites, but form. "The form is the content," stresses Close, whose images contain special ambiguities such as black strips placed throughout an environment that, at time, appear to lie on the surface, and at other times, recede into space. "I come with a concept, but they're real spontaneous," said Close. He prefers to work in large-scale for this series because "it gives the objects in the photographs a little more room to breathe."

The photography exhibit should prove to be an interesting and informative prelude to the photography workshop to be held early in September at the Arts Center. The Virginia Beach Arts Center is located at 1711 Arctic Avenue, just three blocks from the oceanfront. For information call 425-0000.

Diabetes study

People with diabetes who have been taking insulin for 1-15 years are being sought to participate in a nation-wide study of a new drug that might help to prevent eye and nerve damage from this disease.

To be eligible for the study, diabetics must be between 18 and 56 years of age and have few if any signs of diabetes-related eye damage. Because the effects of the drug on unborn children are unknown, women who participate in the study must agree not to become pregnant. For more information, call 301/496-5846, or write National Eye Institute, NIH, Bethesda, Maryland 20205.

Some readers admit that despite their best intentions they aren't making much progress in their books. Dave Nutbrown, of Arizona, who is stationed in the Tidewater area with the Navy had been working on The Sword of Allah, by Richard Elliot, but found it very slow going. As with many other visitors, he found that the beach, and its inhabitants, offers "just too many distractions."

Two weeks

Council to decide pipeline contract

By Lee Cahill

City Council Reporter

In two weeks Virginia Beach City Council will decide whether to follow the recommendation of its city manager and to award an engineering contract for the $200 million Lake Gaston pipeline project to CE Maguire, a Boston-based firm.

Although Maguire was selected for the job by the city's architect and engineer selection committee under an established procedure, questions arose over Maguire's alleged involvement in extortion charges in Boston and his performance on projects in Tidewater and in Massachusetts.

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck toward the end of a six-hour Council meeting Monday evening read a prepared fourteen-page statement answering the questions, describing the contract, containing statistics and making a recommendation to execute the contract.

Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr., who had expressed the most concern over the contract award, said he still had some questions to ask. Council decided to postpone its decision on the contract until August 20 to give members time to study the report, which they had received only two hours earlier.

Muehlenbeck explained the contract is unique in several respects. It allows for more detailed scopes and tighter fee negotiations for subsequent second, third and fourth phases of the project and provides the city with convenient termination points if legal or institutional issues halt or seriously delay the project.

The cost of consulting services only for Phase 1 has been negotiated and this totals $1,027,000. This phase should be completed in eight months and should bring the city to the point where it will have a document as the basis for project planning and financing, informing the public prior to a voter referendum and negotiating agreements with Chesapeake, Franklin, Isle of Wight and Norfolk.

Of the total engineering cost for Phase 1, Maguire would receive $292,600 for basic services and $37,500 for additional services (preparation of technical data for the on-going legal process, archaeological and geotechnical studies on the selected route and an aerial survey of the selected route) and Malcolm Pirnie, who will do the hydraulic portion of the study will receive $249,400 for the basic services and $37,500 for additional ser-

Muehlenbeck said the former contract with Maguire on the Lake Gaston Project amounted to $279,565.42 of which $63,597.56 was paid to subcontractors, within the original commitment of $280,000. Additional information was required for public hearings and for various regulatory agencies beyond the basic environmental report which enabled Virginia Beach to obtain the permits and contracts with the U.S. Government.

The greatest controversy centered over the role of John L. Sloucum, president of CE Maguire, in an extortion case in Boston. Muehlenbeck reported that Sloucum made two political contributions of $4,000 each to an assistant to a former mayor of Boston (Theodore V. Anzalone). "It is our understanding," said Muehlenbeck, that Sloucum and Maguire officials have cooperated fully with the U.S. Attorney's Office which alleges that the funds were extorted from Sloucum by Anzalone. The U.S. Attorney, Muehlenbeck said, has stated that Sloucum was a victim of extortion.

Beach youngsters excel

At the invitation of Johns Hopkins University, 109 seventh grade students of Virginia Beach Public Schools voluntarily took the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) last spring; the test is usually taken by college-bound students in the 11th and 12th grades. The early administration to selected students is designed to identify high achievers and to aid them in preparing for college.

The students were from independence, Kempsville, Lynnhaven, Virginia Beach, and Plaza Junior High, Kemps Landing Intermediate, and the Old Donation Center for the Gifted and Talented.

The students were tested in three areas: the verbal and math portions of the SAT, plus the Test for Standard Written English. Eighteen of the seventh graders scored high enough on the verbal portion to receive the "With Distinction" designation, while two of the 18 scored higher to earn recognition and a certificate at a statewide ceremony. In that SAT math portion, 16 scored 500 or above to earn the "With Distinction" honor; eight of the 16 earned state recognition and one earned regional recognition from Johns Hopkins. In the written portion of the test, 28 scored "With Distinction."

The results of the tests will be studied by the students' guidance counselors who will recommend courses for the student to take in preparation for college.

The SAT exams were given at the Old Donation Center and were administered by the Center for the Advancement of Academically Talented Youth at Johns Hopkins.

The highest combined score by a Virginia Beach seventh grader was made by Catherine M. Burkhardt of Old Donation Center for the Gifted and Talented. She scored 560 in verbal, 610 in math, and 58 in written English. See HIGH, page 12

Congress approves MIA medals

WASHINGTON—Medals, authorized by Congress, will be presented to families of Virginians who are still missing or otherwise unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. The ceremony will be held at 1 p.m. on Saturday, August 18, at the South Portico of the Virginia State Capitol in Richmond, Senator John Warner (R-VA) and Congressman Dan Daniels (5th-VA) recently announced.

"The presentation of these medals is but a small symbol of America's continuing concern for those who served but, as of yet, have not returned to their homes and their families. Although the fate of these brave individuals has not so far been determined, it is clear that we, as a people and as a nation, intend to do all that we can to ascertain their whereabouts, and indeed, see to it that they are not forgotten," said Warner.

The Virginians being honored include 24 members of the Air Force, 19 from the Navy, five from the Army, four from the Marine Corps and two from the State Department, hailing from 26 towns and cities throughout the Commonwealth.

Members of the Virginia

Congressional Delegation will present the awards. Other participants in the ceremony will include representatives of the armed services, Virginia National Guard, veterans' organizations, and state and local officials.

The medals were authorized in the Fiscal Year 1984 Department of Defense Authorization Act. A total of 2,489 medals will be presented nationwide.

Persons who may be eligible to accept these medals and have not yet been notified, should contact Senator John Warner's office in Washington (202/224-3003), or Norfolk (804-441-3079).

ment of a close working relationship and unity between convention and visitor bureaus throughout the world. In addition to discussion sessions with other convention and visitor bureau professionals, Barton participated in sessions concerning convention promotion, tourism promotion, advertising and marketing, membership services and co-op promotion.

The International Association of Convention and Visitor Bureaus was founded in 1914 for the purpose of promoting sound professional practices in travel marketing and in the solicitation and servicing of meetings and conventions. Quick thinking by Beacher helps save lives

Gene Driggers

Last month Instrument Mechanic John Meravy (Shop 94114) was traveling northbound on Highway 255 outside Lexington Park, Maryland looking for his hotel. He had just checked into his temporary duty station at NAS, Patuxent River. Weather conditions were really bad with rain pounding the area. Meravy had missed his turn into the hotel and had to travel to the next intersection to make a U-turn.

Traveling southbound on the four lane highway was a 17-year-old driver with a 16-year-old passenger. "I noticed this car coming down the other side at a high rate of speed and then the car started hydroplaning and fishtailing," Meravy said. "So I immediately started slowing down. Before I knew it, the car had crossed the median, rear end first, and slammed into a station wagon in front of me."

The impact of the two vehicles sent the two young occupants through the windshield of their car, the driver landing directly in front of Meravy's auto. The passenger was sent flying to the side of the road from which the car was originally coming. The station wagon travelled on for another 150 feet, running into a guardrail.

By the time the two vehicles collided, Meravy had already stopped his vehicle. "If I had still been moving, I would have run over the young driver," the mechanic said. "There would have been no way I could have stopped had I not been already stopped earlier."

Being first on the scene, Meravy immediately coordinated life-saving events by calling for blankets from a stopping motorist, instructing someone to call an ambulance and then checking the injured motorists. Finding the young driver in front of his car in fair shape, Meravy proceeded to the other side of the road to check out the passenger. Meravy found the youngster comatose with a faint pulse and massive head injuries. He immediately started CPR and then was assisted by another stopped motorist. CPR was continued until the ambulance arrived.

"I just knew the accident was going to happen before it actually did and I was mentally preparing myself for the emergency service I would have to render," Meravy said. "I found it very strange that I was able to keep my head during the whole ordeal and only got nervous and upset when I got to the hotel."

"I never thought I would have to use my CPR training," Meravy stated. "I only took the training because my father has high blood pressure and if he should ever need assistance while I was around him, I wanted to be sure that I knew what I could do to help. I'm grateful to the Naval Air Rework Facility, where I work for affording me the opportunity to learn CPR."

Cop killers

Hopes are high for the Thurmond-Brooks bill that would limit the manufacture and sale of armor-piercing bullets, called "cop-killers" because they can penetrate the protective vests worn by policemen. After all, the bipartisan measure is supported by the Reagan administration, numerous law enforcement organizations and the National Rifle Association. But this euphoria is misplaced. The bill would do little more than codify existing arrangements that still put police officers at risk from these particular bullets.

The manufacture of armor-piercing bullets is not restricted by law. Instead, there is an ineffective gentleman's agreement among manufacturers and the Treasury Department to limit the sale of these bullets to police, U.S. military forces and foreign governments. The Thurmond-Brooks bill would merely add a mandatory prison sentence for persons who commit violent crimes with firearms loaded with armor-piercing bullets.

In fact, several experts have testified before congressional committees that the bill would affect only 1 percent of the armor-piercing ammunition on the market. They believe it would be easy for manufacturers to circumvent the bill's prohibitions.

For good and sufficient reason, the measure has been stalled in the subcommittee on crime of the House Judiciary Committee. Subcommittee chairman Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., wants the federal government to restrict the sale of any bullet that can penetrate 1 1/2 inches of steel. And Rep. Mario Biaggi, a former policeman who was wounded 10 times while on duty, has introduced legislation to prohibit the retail sale of armor-piercing bullets.

The NRA opposes such a prohibition and argues that it is one more step toward absolute gun control. But the NRA's objections pale before the fact that half the nation's 500,000 police officers are using bullet-proof vests that cannot stop these bullets.

Even though some manufacturers already limit the sale of armor-piercing bullets, clearly a specific federal law is required to prohibit their sale altogether. Congress and the Reagan administration should abandon the Thurmond-Brooks bill and press instead for tougher legislation that really could protect law enforcement officers from bullets being purchased mostly to "kill cops."

Sudden interest

President Reagan, with an eye on the November elections, put on a ranger's hat recently, laced up his hiking boots, stuck an Audubon bird whistle in his vest pocket and headed for the hinterlands. He was off on a three-day tour aimed at building his image as an environmentalist.

First, there was a trip down the Potomac River to Tilghman Island, where the president could kick a few crab traps with the fishermen and talk over pollution damage to the rockfish, clam and oyster industries. Mr. Reagan told watermen his conservation efforts are one of Washington's best-kept secrets.

The next day, it was over to Roosevelt Island, where the president appeared in front of a huge statue of Teddy Roosevelt and signed the 14th annual Environmental Quality Report. He charged that critics were ignoring the "progress we've made in the last few years."

On the third day, President Reagan appeared at Mammoth Cave, Ky. He was welcomed by an enthusiastic crowd of campers. He told them that despite what they've heard, he has helped rescue America's wetlands, has improved national park maintenance, has acted to protect endangered species and has moved aggressively to clean up toxic waste.

Environmental groups were irritated by Mr. Reagan's sudden interest in saving the outdoors. They should have been pleased that the president has recognized the popularity of their cause.

It takes a lot of nerve to go out among the "killer trees."

Modems and their uses

Previous articles have covered disk drives and printers, two of the hardware devices you're most likely to attach to your computer. Another device you may want to add is a modem (short for modulator-demodulator), which enables your computer to send and receive data over the telephone network. This data can come from a mainframe computer at school, from a national computer information service, or from a friend's computer.

Why Modems?

If you can run a set of wires from one computer to another, you don't need a modem for short distances—say, from one house to the next. Over longer distances, however, the data sent on the wires would get weak and garbled. Besides, it just isn't practical for all of us to go running wires all over Virginia Beach. The telephone company has already done that for us.

But the telephone lines are designed to transmit voices, not computer data (though that may change in the future). That's what the modem is for. It generates a carrier signal, which the telephone network can transmit. The transmitting modem puts the computer data onto the carrier. The receiving modem separates the data from the carrier, and passes the data to the computer.

Beach Bytes

By John Gaywood

Modem Types

There are two general types of modems: direct-connect and acoustic coupler. As the name implies, direct-connect modems connect directly to the telephone lines through the modular phone plugs used in most homes today. You plug the modem into the wall and into the computer, then plug your telephone into the modem. The more expensive modems in this category ($400-$650) can also dial numbers automatically, and some can even log in for you.

Acoustic couplers use sound to send the computer data through the telephone handset. These modems are recognizable by the pair of rubber-cupped sockets on top. You rest the handset into these sockets to transfer data. Be warned: you must have a regular, round-ended handset. If you have one of the more modern phones with squared-off edges, or a fancy designer phone, it probably won't fit in the rubber cups.

The term baud is a measure of the speed at which data is sent over the telephone lines. At 300 baud, the most common speed, approximately 30 characters can be transmitted per second. This is fast enough for many purposes, and is the only speed available for the less expensive modems. The more expensive modems can communicate at 1200 baud, or give you a selection of 300 and 1200 baud.

If you can afford roughly $500 for a modem, get one that gives you the choice of speeds. If your budget is limited, you can get started with a 300 baud modem for less than $100.

Just one more thing about modems: in addition to the modem itself and a cable to connect it to the computer, you will also need a program to tell your computer how to talk through the modem. More about this in another column.

Star struck

Novels written to tie in with a popular movie or television series have become common in recent years. They come in many different formats, with or without photographs, sometimes abbreviated for children, and by famous or unknown writers.

Books

By Carolyn Gaywood

None of them, however, has become as wildly successful in print as Star Trek. A count of the listings on the Virginia Beach Public Library's computer reveals 42 different entries. There are novelized TV episodes, novelizations of the three movies, original stories based on the characters, and a Quiz Book, a Concordance, a Catalog, and a Cooking Manual. Well known science fiction writers including James Blish, Harlan Ellison, David Gerrold, Alan Dean Foster, and Vonda McIntyre have contributed to the impressive total.

The popularity of Star Trek seems to go far beyond the usual science fiction audience. Many fans say that it is the crew of the Enterprise that they care about. There is a sense of strong emotional ties between Captain Kirk and his officers that no other television show set in space has seemed to capture. No other show has succeeded in creating a world as mysterious and yet so accessible as Star Trek. Star Trek seems to offer future generations in acceptable doses, too. The technology of the Enterprise exists to serve the crew, not simply to be admired. In this, it is quite realistic. The early days of science fiction were full of stories where inventors spent all their time in basement laboratories far away from any emotional problems. In reversing that approach Star Trek has created a much broader appeal.

Those who have always dreamed of meeting a member of the Enterprise crew will have a chance this month when Chekov visits Virginia Beach. During the weekend of August 17 to 19, Pavilion will be the site of Galacon, a gathering of fantasy and science fiction fans. In addition to several popular authors and actors, the convention will probably attract a number of exotic aliens. Another effect of Star Trek has been to inspire fans to attend conventions costumed as their favorite bug eyed monster.

Aliens are probably the other main attraction of Star Trek. Throughout most of history, people have believed that they shared the Earth with other intelligent beings, some frightening and some just strange and magical. Now that science has eliminated all but the occasional Sasquatch sighting, people look to space to provide contact with the otherworldly. In some ways the voyages of the Enterprise are the Arabian Nights of the NASA generation. At the same time, they reflect a twentieth century optimism that the unknown is not always hostile and can be explored.

Beach awarded grants

The State Department of Corrections has approved the fourth year funding of the Community Diversion Incentive Program.

The $90,072 needed for the program was appropriated recently by Virginia Beach City Council.

Virginia Beach has also been awarded $2,012 from the Division of Motor Vehicles to improve traffic safety and reduce accidents in the city. The funds will be used to train two of the city's traffic engineers.

Neptune Festival countdown: Eight beautiful princesses

What weighs 902 pounds and has a combined height of 43 feet? Give up? Well, that is the combined size of the 1984 King Neptune's Royal Court. The eight princesses selected will represent the eight high schools in Virginia Beach and the Neptune Festival throughout the year.

During the Neptune Festival, the princesses will accompany King Neptune XI on each of his many appearances. If you would like to have the princesses appear at your civic or charitable function, you may call the Neptune Festival Office at (804) 490-1221 for details.

A Total of 85 girls were accepted as Neptune Festival Princess applicants. Robert DeFord, Chairman of the Princess Selection Committee stated, "The selection of the final group of girls to be princesses for the Royal Court was one of the most difficult tasks this committee has undertaken." Each contestant was certainly qualified to be a Neptune Festival princess, but we could only choose eight finalists. Judging was based on the entrant's participation in school activities, community involvement, poise and appearance, as well as academic achievement and honors. Judges met with each applicant and then chose the two top-scoring representatives to be finalists from each school. One week later, a different set of judges made the final decisions.

The following young women comprise the Royal Court of the 11th Annual Virginia Beach Neptune Festival:

Alice Benham, Bayside High School, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Benham. Miss Benham is a member of the National Honor Society, Latin Club, Spanish Club and has been Ring Dance

Concert Cinema debuts in Beach

By Barbara Ann Turner
VBS Correspondent

It has been called the latest innovation in the music industry, and the continuation of an age old tradition. Concert Cinema, the brain child of Robert Wilson and Robert Kardashian of Music Theatre Network, melds the rock video craze to the short subject film.

What it is exactly is three to five minutes of heavily edited concert footage of a big-name band performing a single song in concert. It is not strictly a video as we have come to know them. It does not tell a story or use flashy, psychedelic images. "But," cautioned Paula Blanchard of Mother's Records and Tapes, "when MTV got going three years ago, videos used strictly concert footage." Blanchard insisted that Concert Cinema can be viewed as the refinement of a certain spectrum of the video industry that is going largely unexplored.

Locally, only the Hilltop Two, Virginia Beach's AMC theatre, is screening the Concert Cinema shorts. Thus far, three of these shorts have been produced and are being distributed by Cinema Concepts Theatre Service Company of Atlanta. They are single-song performances by Duran, Duran, Van Halen, and the Police. Hilltop is showing the Police in a performance of their hit, Synchromy, before all screenings of their feature films. Paul McHenry, District Manager for AMC, notes that the Police short has been released in conjunction with the appearance of their new album.

Hilltop will be showing the concert shorts on a trial basis for the next thirteen weeks. McHenry acknowledged that "favorable public response is the best selling device. We will be keeping a close check on audience reaction."

Short subject films are a movie tradition and McHenry sees Concert Cinema as an updated continuation of that tradition. Comedy shorts were the forerunner to television situation comedy programs. "They are also an extension of the background music before the film. I feel they are tuned into the proper channel for audience appeal."

Concert Cinema is also being viewed as a merchandising tool, and as purely promotional. The bulk of the new shorts are sponsored and carry a 15-20 second product identification message after the music. Jack Rattigan, General Manager of WNOR Radio, feels that commercials before films are a negative development. "It is one thing to have to pay for the entertainment, but it is intrusive and unfair to be subjected to advertisement before the film."

Still very new, Concert Cinema seems to take most movie-goers by surprise. Paula Blanchard believes that once the phenomenon has caught on it could be very popular, having an impact in both the music industry and in the theatre business. "Its greatest impact could come in helping to break new bands." MTV has been enormously successful this way.

Paul McHenry believes that the new shorts could help pull audiences into the theatre or at least influence their choice of movie house. "Audiences can enjoy additional entertainment at no extra charge. It may become just another facet of the movie-going experience."

Festivities abound during Publick Times at Colonial Williamsburg, September 8-9

Bustling town fair booths and colonial soldiers' tents dot Market Square green the weekend of September 8-9 for the gala re-creation of an 18th-century Publick Times at Colonial Williamsburg.

Reminiscent of the military encampments and market days of 200 years ago, Publick Times here will bring the town to life with craftsmen, peddlers, entertainers and soldiers. Hours of the event are Saturday, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Sunday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The original Publick Times was a period each fall when the Virginia Legislature and General Court met for business sessions in Williamsburg, the capital of Britain's largest colony in the New World. The sessions also attracted merchants, planters and socialites, providing a natural time for an extensive fair or market.

Publick Times often coincided with a general muster of every able-bodied male in the Williamsburg military district. The law required that most men aged 16-60 serve in the state militia, available for service during times of emergency or civil disturbance.

As was common in the 18th-century, Williamsburg will also become the setting for a military encampment, Sept. 8-9. The regiment soldiers along with their wives and families, or "camp followers," will live on Market Square.

Some 300 soldiers and camp followers are expected to attend Publick Times representing several companies from original colonial militia units. The Virginia State Garrison Regiment, the Colonial Williamsburg Militia and Fire and Drum Corps will host the festivities.

The public is invited to view the encampment and view the typical daily camp activities of the soldiers and their families.

Highlights of the encampment are morning reveille, a parade and recruiting session, a demonstration of battlefield techniques, a re-enactment of a court martial and an open-air drumhead worship service.

On the other side of Market Square, peddlers and entertainers will stroll about, typical of markets 200 years ago. The finest wares of Colonial Williamsburg merchants will be displayed at a dozen fair booths and an auctioneer will offer his own choice items to the highest bidder.

Craftsmen will demonstrate their skills at blacksmithing, basketmaking, pewter-casting and leather-working. Vendors will sell fresh baked goods, cool cider and other refreshments.

Fiddlers, dancers, actors and a magician provide colonial entertainment and other special events include: horse races, children's games, colonial fire engine demonstrations, evening dancing by a bonfire, 18th-century-style foot-ball and the fanfare of a military tattoo capped off with aerial fireworks.

For more information about Publick Times, please write: Department of Travel Marketing, Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, P.O. Box C, Williamsburg, VA 23187; or call 1-800-444-8956 (in Virginia, 1-800-582-8976).

The bustle and excitement of 18th-century markets and fairs will thrive again, September 8-9, on Colonial Williamsburg's Market Square Green where visitors can browse through rustic stands brimming with food, household goods and notions of the period. As well, each day of the fair will feature costumed entertainers, livestock shows, games and other diversions in the restored Virginia capital.

Chuck Faulkner says

Honey firms up cream

By Chuck Faulkner

Wax Fruit, Cleaning - Simply wipe it with a cloth moistened with alcohol. To clean wax flowers, dip them in alcohol and scrub them with an old toothbrush.

Weeds, Killing - Spray with a mixture of hot, very salty water. If weeds are growing among plants, pour the water directly onto the weed and around the base.

Weevils, Getting Rid Of - Fill some ordinary bottle caps from Ketchup or soft drink bottles with crushed red peppers, and place them at various points in your cupboard. They hate the smell and quickly disappear. Whole bay leaves are another good weevil chaser. Scatter them around your cupboards, as well as putting one or two in your flour containers, cereal boxes and other containers.

Whipped Cream - Add a teaspoon of honey to the cream and it'll stay firm in cakes, cookies, etc.

Whites, Fading - Boil fading whites in two gallons of water to which one half cup of cream of tartar has been added. If linen is fading or turning yellow soak it in buttermilk for twenty minutes, then rinse well and hang out to dry in the sunshine.

Windows, Cleaning In Freezing Weather - Wash them with a soft cloth soaked in a mixture of one fourth cup of denatured alcohol and one quart of warm water. Polish with an old black and white newspaper.

International designers succeed at setting seasonal trends

Fashion Focus

By CAROL PRETLOW

There is no denying the influence for major designers on our fashion decisions. In fact even at the very least international trends make interesting reading. For some reason we are fascinated with every little detail shown by Jean Muir, Bill Blass, Carl Lagerfeld, Ralph Lauren and others. Even without being able to afford their inspirations, their keys to the world of glamour let us fantasize about being fashion jet setters. For just a few minutes let's pretend that buying groceries, washing dishes and mowing lawns are things we only know of from our reading.

Long lauded as the "boy genius" of fashion, Yves Saint Laurent shows signs of ageing gracefully. Combining wit and classism he helps us make style fun. This season his large scale costume jewelry is of as much interest as his tunics or his chemises. For the whimsical among us his sequined evening veiling adorned with a silk rose is quite an entrance maker.

Is there ever a season when we don't feel the presence of Coco Chanel? Carl Lagerfeld gives Chanel inspired suits at their best. This season his looks range from a tailored pink pant suit to motor cycle dressing with the requisite, Chanel chains and finally to polka dot trimmed daytime classic. In short he has it all.

The Japanese are just about everywhere. This season Mujake should be watched. A personal favorite and one you would do well to imitate is a sleeveless mantle of linen. Fully fringed and worn like a shawl it can be easily layered over trouser and jacket combination in early Fall.

Ease and comfort come to us from Giorgio Armani. Translating his men's wear expertise into women's dressing, Armani gives us coats, jackets and loose femininity.

Whether it is pure fantasy or down home reality, fashion is fun no matter who the designer is cutting the cloth.

Tops in Blue Air Force Super Bowl show to appear

One of the 111 worldwide performances of the U.S. Air Force's entertainment showcase, Tops in Blue, will be a featured attraction of the 1984 State Fair of Virginia on Military Day, Sunday, September 30, at 8:30 p.m. for a free grandstand extravaganza, according to C.L. Teachworth, the State Fair's Executive Vice President.

Tops in Blue is a family oriented show, with a cast of 28 U.S. Air Force professionals drawn from military bases all over the world. Their performing is not their vocation, but their love and they present a package as professional as seen in New York, Las Vegas or Los Angeles. They will be showcased on the State Fair stage, amid their own full stage lighting, state-of-the-art sound, elaborate costuming and full orchestration.

The cast was chosen from over 250 finalist in a worldwide talent search. They spent a full month of intensive rehearsal, of 18 hours a day, a Lackland Air Force Base, Texas before going on a tour that will take them to 105 cities and military bases in 173 days. Their final mission is to provide the half-time entertainment for Super Bowl XIX, in New Orleans, January 20, 1985 for a capacity crowd and a TV audience of 110 million.

Tops in Blue was formed 31 years ago to provide professional quality entertainment to Air Force personnel, with emphasis on remote and isolated installations. Today additional benefits are recognized by including jointly sponsored performances, like the State Fair of Virginia, for increased Air Force awareness in recruiting efforts.

Like those of the past, the 1984 show is tailor made to encompass the talents of its Air Force professionals - a unique process in this age of pre-packaging. There exists today no other program on the scale and magnitude of Tops in Blue. Still the idea remains fairly simple - family entertaining family - the most simple, direct, and intimate form of show business.

The company carries a full production staff, directed by Tom Edwards, Chief of Air Force Entertainment. It offers two hours of exceptional talent laced with dazzling special effects and elaborate costumes. It is truly a touring version in the grand tradition of the Musical Variety Show.

Housing for the elderly in America faces a number of critical changes in the near future, as the elderly population continues to increase and its characteristics change, according to a statement by the Institute of Real Estate Management.

"The manager of an elderly housing complex in the future may well find that the change in age mix will create a different social atmosphere, along with an increase in need for services and supportive design features," said Rosetta Parker, certified property manager and author of the book, "Housing for the Elderly: The Handbook for Managers."

"It is anticipated that future residents will enter their retirement years healthier and more physically active than preceding generations were at that point in their lives," Parker said.

Contel reaches out to Knotts Island

Continental Telephone has completed the installation of new central office equipment in Knotts Island, NC. The cost of the new equipment is $177,500, said Spence Kiser, superintendent-telephone services with Continental in Chesapeake.

A central office is a center where calls are processed and sent to their destinations. The new Knotts Island office is called a remote because it works like a satellite off of the Shipp's Corner central office in Princess Anne.

"With the new computer controlled office, we will be able to keep up with growth faster and more economically," said Kiser.

"Instead of installing large, expensive copper cables we will be able to add new pieces of equipment that plug into the existing equipment. We'll also be able to add new services more quickly as they become available."

The new remote office will allow Continental to offer special custom calling features: call waiting, call forwarding, three-way calling and speed calling.

Continental, the second largest phone company operating in Virginia, provides service to 370 people in the Knotts Island exchange.

Children's World opens

To celebrate its official grand opening, Kempsville Children's World is holding a Family Day of Carnival Fun with a break dance exhibition, games, a clown and a "Moon Walk" all free of charge to the public on Sunday, August 12.

The Kempsville Children's World Center at 5230 Indian River Road will be open Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. and will feature entertainment, refreshments, drawings for prizes and grand opening ceremonies, according to Cindy Johnson, center director. Officiating at the 1 p.m. ribbon cutting ceremonies will be the Honorable Reba McClanahan, vice mayor of Virginia Beach.

With the opening of each new center, Children's World initiates a community support campaign "Children Helping Children." Worthy community programs are recognized and supported. In keeping with this tradition, Johnson will present a cash contribution to Carol and David Miller, founders of the Virginia Beach Chapter of Kreye's Syndrome. The Virginia Beach Chapter of Kreye's Syndrome educates parents about Kreye's Syndrome and helps fund research.

Following the ribbon cutting, the afternoon will be packed with entertainment and fun for everyone. The X-Man Poppers, a local break dancing group, will perform at 1:30 p.m. After a one-half hour exhibition of "popping and locking," the X-Man Poppers will invite everyone to jump in and join them as they demonstrate some basic "breaking" maneuvers.

Children's World will also have a "Moon Walk," a huge air-filled capsule with a thick air-filled floor which acts like a trampoline. When several children climb inside, one bounces leads to another and the result is happy tumbling and scrambling.

Another main attraction of the Carnival Day is the appearance of Salty the Clown, a Virginia Beach local and favorite. Salty the Clown will be handing out free balloons and sculpting animal figures out of balloons.

Drawings will be held for sessions of free child care, prizes of a two-week session, a one-month session and a three-month session of free child care will be awarded to three lucky families. In addition to the drawings, there will be a free gift for the first 175 children attending the Open House.

Refreshments will also be served including cotton candy, popcorn, cake, hotdogs and cold drinks.

For further information Beach people should call Children's World at 495-3600.

"The storm is passing over" to feature Beach actors

NORFOLK -- Danny Scarborough, a sort of "pled piper" of dance for minority young people, is gearing up for his fifth Tidewater dance production. Entitled "The Storm Is Passing Over," Scarborough describes the production as "a celebration of a people's optimism." Based on cultural experiences and the heritage of black Americans, Scarborough's "The Storm Is Passing Over" will include a choreographed setting of Alex Haley's Roots and his "How I Got Over/Old Landmark," which is a stylized "living museum exploration of a South Black Baptist Church," first seen in Tidewater in his 1981 production "Something About The Music." A 1979 Emmy Award winning choreographer, Scarborough is dance instructor for an eight-week Summer Arts Workshop, currently being sponsored by the Southeastern Virginia Arts Association (SEVAA).

Four public performances of "The Storm Is Passing Over" will occur Thursday through Saturday, August 9-11 at 8 p.m. and at 3 p.m. on Sunday, August 12. All performances will be held at Norfolk's Center Theater, Ninth and Granby Streets. A special free matinee performance for organized groups of young people and senior citizens will be held at 2 p.m. on Thursday, August 9.

Nearly 70 young people are participating in the SEVAA Summer Arts Workshop, which is aimed at minority young people throughout Tidewater aged 13 through college age. The Workshop provides daily classes in dance and visual art and the opportunity to study with highly talented black professional artists. Christyl Cartwright, freelance courtroom artist for WAVY-TV, is the Workshop's visual art instructor and will coordinate the visual art stu-

Dance for special people set

A dance for physically and mentally handicapped people will be held Saturday, August 18, from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. The location will be at the Bow Creek Recreation Center, 3427 Clubhouse Road in Virginia Beach. The dance will be sponsored by the Bayside Lions Club, the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation and CLASP (Citizens Loving All Special People).

Admission is free. Refreshments will be served and door prizes will be given. Billy Bob from "Show Biz" will be there for entertainment. Parents and guardians are welcome, however, chaperones will be present at all times.

Transportation is available thru TRT at $5 per roundtrip, per individual. CLASP must know by August 9 if transportation is needed. Call Carolyn Wismer at 853-8789 after 7 p.m. weekdays or anytime weekends to reserve space.

For further information call either Bob DeLamonte at 853-6500 or Harry Baird at 486-3110.

Council ponders pipeline

Other questions raised and Muehlenbeck's replies included: Substantial cost of overruns on the Norfolk Seawall project—Maguire's estimate for the work was $1,398,445 while the actual cost was $1,151,835 including a change order cost of $32,000. The Norfolk Redevelopment and Housing Authority awarded Maguire a second contract.

Differences in cost estimates for the Virginia Beach Route vs. the Corps Route—The Virginia Beach route is not estimated to cost $30 million more than the Corps route as charged. The Beach route allows for inflation ($45,849,200), 84.5 miles rather than 79.5 miles, a 60-inch pipe rather than a 48-inch pipe and construction through less sensitive areas. The Corps route also would affect a greater number of property owners with additional right-of-way acquisition problems.

Working relationship between CE Maguire Inc. and other Tidewater cities, specifically Chesapeake—Maguire's work with the City of Chesapeake involves an evaluation and presentation of a matrix of data on various connection options available to Chesapeake. It does not require a recommendation for the best alternative. The work for Chesapeake and familiarity with that system can enhance Beach abilities to work together if Chesapeake elects to participate in the Gaston project. Malcolm Pirnie, Inc. will make the evaluation for various routes in connection with potential partners in the Virginia Beach/Gaston project. Malcolm Pirnie has substantial knowledge of the Norfolk and Chesapeake utility systems.

New mayor sees cooperation key to Virginia Beach growth

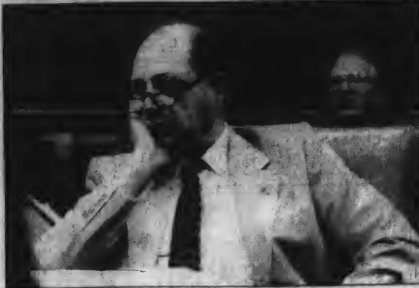

By Ronnie Greene
Staff Writer

The wait to see the new mayor stretched on. Arriving promptly at 3 p.m., the interviewer had time enough to thumb through a proliferation of pamphlets and booklets decorating Harold Heischober's reception area. A copy of Economic Profile of Virginia Beach and the Virginia Beach Accommodations Directory were just two of a scattering of such material on display.

But the half-hour wait was worth it. Once inside the mayor's office things speed up. It is clear that Harold Heischober plays hard and speaks out. Born to poverty in New York 64 years ago, Heischober has worked for everything he has earned.

That includes his days as a football player-coach in the 40's, schooling at St. John's University years earlier and now his first stint as mayor, and second as Councilman At Large. In between football and politics, Heischober has spent a number of years in the automotive industry, and presently is the chairman/owner of Pembroke Mazda, Pembroke Chrysler-Plymouth Inc. and Heischober Enterprises Inc. in Virginia Beach.

An example of his hard-nosed approach is the way Heischober reacted in 1982 after losing to

Louis R. Jones by a 6-5 count in the mayoral election. To those who voted against him, Heischober had harsh words publicly. Heischober loves to win and hates to lose. The saying that goes "It's not whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game," means absolutely nothing to the new mayor of Virginia Beach.

To Harold Heischober, "Winning is everything."

Heischober's first taste of politics came as a result of his acquaintance with former Norfolk mayor Fred Duckworth in the early 50's. Since "whetting his appetite" then, he has gradually become involved in local and statewide politics to the point that he is one of the front running Republicans in Virginia. But he vows his political journey has found its stopping point. After serving as Mayor and Councilman, Heischober will call it quits.

Sun: What do you feel are Virginia Beach's greatest assets?

Heischober: Our tourist related industry and presence of the military. Our climate. Very simply put, our cultural pursuits are coming on board. The cultural opportunities of a cosmopolitan city are in sight and underway.

1984 Neptune Festival "Say It With Music"

VIRGINIA BEACH—Appearances by trumpet virtuoso Al Hirt, a visit from the newly crowned Miss Chiquita Banana, and participation by a Mardi Gras parade unit which has never before performed outside New Orleans are among the highlights of the 1984 Neptune Festival to be held in Virginia Beach September 25-30. This year's theme is "Say It With Music."

Reigning over the 1984 Festival will be Second District Congressman G. William Whitehurst who takes his place among 10 previous kings.

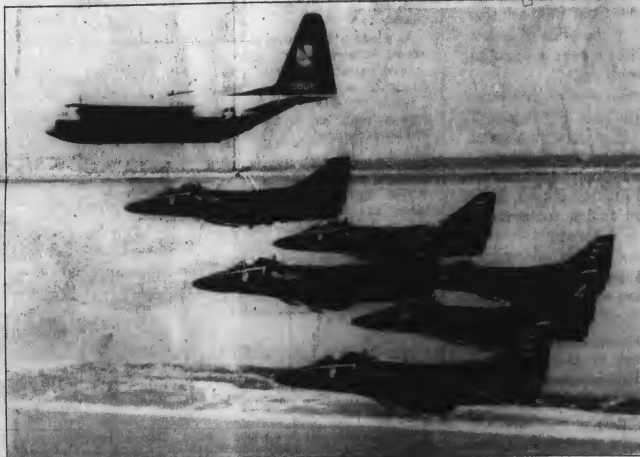

According to Tom Flounders, chairman of the festival, this year's event promises to be better than ever.

"Visits by popular celebrities, participation by many new volunteers, and the addition of several new attractions are making this particular festival an extremely exciting one in which to be involved. And of course, with Congressman G. William Whitehurst as king...well, that's just icing on the cake."

In addition to appearances by Al Hirt, who will perform at the Annual Neptune Festival Ball and participate in the Neptune Festival Parade, the festival will be graced with other well known personalities such as soccer champion Kyle Rote, Jr., and Rosey Grier, former professional football player, who will participate in the annual Neptune Festival Prayer Breakfast.

The Krewe of Caesar, a famous New Orleans Mardi Gras parade unit, will be the first ever to perform outside its home city when it marches in the Neptune Festival Grand Parade. The group's journey to Virginia Beach will be sponsored by Chiquita Brands, Inc. They are also bringing the newly crowned Miss Chiquita Banana who will also be in the Parade. The Krewe of Caesar is one of many festival organizations whose parade units are known for their brightly colored attire and elaborate floats that line New Orleans streets during Mardi Gras. Fifty

Lesner Bridge boat ramp is capital project

The Lesner Bridge Boat Ramp has been established as a capital project for Virginia Beach.

Virginia Beach City Council recently, by a vote of 11-0, established the ramp as a capital project and appropriated $15,000 for plans which will be used to obtain a grant from the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries which is expected to pay for most of the $1.3 million cost of the ramp.

State studies selection of school boards

The House Privileges and Elections Committee's Subcommittee studying selection of school board members has announced a schedule of three public hearings. This Subcommittee was created as a result of House Resolution 12 of the 1984 General Assembly, which directed the Privileges and Elections Committee to study the selection of school boards and report to the 1985 session of the legislature.

The first hearing will be held on Thursday, August 16, at 2 p.m., in the Atlantic Ballroom of the Pavilion Tower, 1900 Pavilion Drive in Virginia Beach.

School board members in Virginia cities are appointed by the City Council. County school boards are either appointed by the board of supervisors or selected by a school board selection commission whose members are appointed by the circuit court, depending upon the particular county. Virginia law presently does not permit the popular election of school board members. The Subcommittee is interested in the views of the public on the present selection methods, the merits of permitting the local option of electing school boards by popular vote, and other matters relating to the selection of school boards.

Persons wishing to address the Subcommittee at these hearings are asked to contact Anne Howard, House of Delegates Clerk's Office, (804) 786-7681. For further information about the study, call or write Dr. Jack Austin, Division of Legislative Services, P. O. Box 3-AG, Richmond, Virginia, 23208, (804) 786-3591.

City looking to use historic Land estate

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

A concept for public use of the Francis Land House has been endorsed by Virginia Beach City Council. However, Council recently requested more details on finances before considering a $100,000 expenditure for improving the building.

The concept, recommended by the Francis Land House Committee, calls for the house to be used for the entertainment of important guests of the city at official receptions and gatherings, a display for period furnishings and for daily public tours and as a meeting place for such organizations as the Council of Garden Clubs, the DAR and the Historical Society.

Under the plan the city would administer all the programs and hire the necessary personnel to conduct the activities. A board of governors established by City Council would formulate policies for the operation of the house.

Assistant to the City Manager David Grochmal who presented the proposal said that revenues estimated at $35,000 would come from tours, membership fees, annual fund raising event, rental of office space, rental for receptions, and gift shop gross profit. Expenses, including one manager, five tour guides and one maid, and other maintenance and operation expenses would cost $31,415.

General improvements to the house call for replacement of the mechanical system, installation of interior storm windows, addition of six-inch insulation in the attic, a modification of the restroom to accommodate the handicapped; an exit from the second floor, an additional door at the rear of the first floor, an additional exit at the front under the porch, waterproofing exterior walls, waterproofing the floor by removing brick pavers, installing a vapor barrier and replacing brick, cleaning and sealing interior brick walls, installing sheet rock on the ceiling and installing light fixtures in ceiling.

Councilwoman Nancy Creech said she liked the concept but wanted more details on the revenues, the budget, etc.

Mayor Harold Heischober said the matter might be considered in executive session.

Contel seeking rate increase

The City of Virginia Beach is fighting telephone rate increases requested by Continental Telephone Company of Virginia.

The company serves all of Pungo and Blackwater, a portion of Princess Anne Borough including the Civic Center complex, and part of Green Run.

Continental has applied to the State Corporation Commission for an increase in rates for both residential and business customers. Also requested by the company is the imposition of a new access charge on all customers.

The new rates would increase the authorized return on equity from 15 percent to between 16.25 and 16.75 percent.

Council Monday afternoon adopted a resolution opposing the increases.

Auto repair or junkyard?

By Lee Cahill

The speaker wasn't opposing the petition, exactly, but she wanted to know that she wasn't getting a junkyard in her neighborhood. The trouble with the city's ordinances, Ann Joyce said, is that there is no difference between an auto garage and a junkyard. She added there is no way to tell whether an auto is being dismantled, which is more the province of a junkyard, than being repaired, which is the job of an auto garage.

Virginia Beach City Council agreed that she had cause for concern and placed a number of conditions on a conditional use permit to forestall any future problems in the neighborhood.

City Council approved the application of Eleanor E. Witham for a conditional use permit for an auto body repair shop on a .730-acre parcel on the east side of First Colonial Road, south of Michigan Avenue in the Lynnhaven Borough. Her brother Ed Spruill plans to operate the shop there.

To compound matters, Joyce said, property owners are not being required—or permitted—to install curbs, gutters and "He was the Neil Simon of his day. He was a commercial playwright," said the director. And, whereas the Williamsburg Festival is academically oriented, "we take a commercial approach." Henry deShields is not blinded by romantic visions of Elizabethan England or of Shakespeare's role in it. As director of the Shakespeare-By-The-Sea Festival, deShields emphasizes historical accuracy and authenticity in production.

The Festival is sponsored by the City of Virginia Beach through the Performing Arts Unit of the Department of Parks and Recreation. This season's productions, MacBeth and The Comedy Of Errors, will be staged at the Pavilion Theatre in ten performances beginning August 17 and running through September 1. Tickets are four dollars for a single performance and seven dollars for one admission to each production. Pre-performance activities in the courtyard will be free of charge.

Director deShields emphasized that the "Spirit of the original productions is maintained" in this contemporary staging. "Set construction is very similar to the original. As in Shakespeare's time, the emphasis will fall on elaborate costuming rather than set design." Original costumes for the two productions were designed by Peggie MacArthur and cost nearly $5,000, according to deShields.

The production is elaborate in other ways. A cast of paid professional actors train and rehearse for eight weeks in preparation for performance. A full week of that time is devoted to historical analysis of each play. The director has insisted that the company give a learned performance. This season has seen the start of a new tradition, "Shakespeare was meant to be staged," deShields said. Students enjoy the plays in production much more than in a book.

The educational aspect of the festival is a major factor in productions. In previous years, the company would tour local schools and present a 90 minute condensation of the plays. "This was much too rough on the actors," explained deShields. This season, Virginia Beach Public Schools have contracted for seven performances at Pavilion. "Shakespeare was meant to be staged," deShields said. Students enjoy the plays in production much more than in a book.

Some homeowners may have to pay for trash collection

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

A misunderstanding between the developer and the Planning Department about what was approved at a site plan review has resulted in a solution which one Virginia Beach Council member termed "terrible."

City Council by a vote of 8-3 recently approved a variance requested by the Terry/Peterson Development Corporation which will allow the developer to construct homes without access to a public street. Garbage collection, under the plan, will be the responsibility of a separate homeowners association of the 113 homes in the project.

Vice Mayor Reba McClanan said that she would vote for the variance, "but I think it's terrible -- home owners paying for their own trash collection!"

The tract is on the east side of Independence Boulevard, 640 feet north of Green Meadow Court in the Timberlake Planned Unit Development in the Kempsville Borough. It is the last parcel to be developed residential in the Timberlake development.

Of the 113 homes in the development, 88 will not face a standard public street but will have access to the street through 24-foot wide common access easements.

The developer claims that he has spent $750,000 before he was informed by the city that his plan did not meet city standards although the developer had received approval of its site plans.

Planning Director Robert Scott said that the Planning Department and the developer do not agree on what was approved.

The access streets will also have to be maintained by a homeowners association leading Councilwoman Meyera Oberdorf to ask what would happen when the homeowners association could no longer support this activity. The association would include only the 113 homes.

Robert Cromwell, attorney for the developer, said his client would agree to notifying home buyers in the deed that they will be required to maintain the streets. Councilman Robert G. Jones said he wanted the property owners to at least be aware.

"I do hope this kind of mix-up doesn't happen often; it makes us look silly," Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy, Jr. said.

Councilwomen Barbara Henley and Meyera Oberdorf and R. Jones dissented, voting against the variance approval.

City relaxing restrictions on charter buses

The City of Virginia Beach is relaxing restrictions on charter buses adopted in 1981.

In 1981, City Council approved an ordinance prohibiting the parking or stopping of charter buses on city streets and city property in the Virginia Beach Borough and portions of the Lynnhaven Borough from May 1 to October 1 of each year. The bus operators were allowed to discharge passengers and pick up passengers at the Pavilion with a trolley bus service available to take them to the oceanfront.

According to City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck the feedback has been negative, and overnight bus charter companies have complained that Virginia Beach "charges a tariff on buses entering the city."

Muehlenbeck said that the Tourist Development Division has been actively soliciting overnight bus group visitation for hotels throughout Virginia Beach and with the development of Waterside, bus groups are staying in Norfolk hotels and visiting Virginia Beach for the day. Williamsburg, Busch Gardens, Norfolk and Virginia Beach are all aggressively promoting a package campaign, he said.

In the meantime, when Tidewater Regional Transit began operating the Transportation Center at the Dome this summer, it decided not to offer a regular trolley pickup at the Pavilion, which would have exaggerated the problems experienced by charter buses. TRT agreed to offer temporary transportation to the Oceanfront.

However, to offset the negative publicity the city has been receiving from the charter bus community, Muehlenbeck recommended that charter buses be allowed to stop closer to the Oceanfront -- at the circular driveway on the east side of the Dome and in a designated area on the east side of Arlie Avenue next to the Dome parking lot. He also asked for authority for parking or stopping of charter buses where they are now prohibited, to accommodate special events or activities at hotels where buses are unable to enter the hotel and other private property.

Hot Tub Shoppe expands operations to Industrial Park

VIRGINIA BEACH—Great Atlantic Hot Tub Shoppe, one of the first retail and wholesale hot tub companies on the East Coast, will expand its operations with the construction of a new 12,000-square-foot showroom and warehouse on 2.96 acres in Oceana West Industrial Park here.

"We're bulging at the seams," said Steve Biggs, president of the company. "We were looking for a site that could accommodate our requirements as well as be in a central location for our customers in the Tidewater area."

Although circumstances are such that the company can afford to seek a larger operating base, there was a time when, adversity seemed insurmountable. Just three months after Biggs and his partner, Rich Werber, opened their shop on With Duck Road in May 1978, an arsonist set it ablaze along with two adjoining establishments.

"It was grim," remembered Werber. "We had received a large shipment of hot tubs just hours before the store went up in smoke, causing us to be underinsured at that moment. We really didn't think we would make it."

But with the help of friends and a lot of determination, the partners kept the company from going under. They conducted business out of Werber's house until they found a larger location in the same block of With Duck Road.

"You must remember," said Biggs, "the whole idea of hot tubs and spas for recreation was virtually unheard of on the East Coast as late as the 1970s. We had a tremendous problem educating the public and generating interest. But that interest seemed genuine, so we decided to make a go of it after the fire."

Like many successful ventures, the Great Atlantic Hot Tub Shoppe grew out of foresight and luck. In 1977 Biggs, then owner of a commercial painting business, visited his brother in California, where wooden hot tubs were the latest craze. He returned home with the knowledge that hot tubs were available only in California. He then met with Werber, a former college roommate, who was a local investment banker about to move to Charlotte, N.C. The partnership was formed.

In six years, the volume of their hot tub and spa business has doubled twice. To complement the retail side of the business, they have built a wholesale network of 35 independent dealers in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, West Virginia, Delaware and Maryland, and have a larger list of occasional wholesale customers.

This year, the Great Atlantic Hot Tub Shoppe was named to Inc. magazine's list of the top 500 fastest growing private companies in the United States.

ies in the United States.

The new facility will include a 3,000-square-foot showroom, 2,500 square feet of office space, and 6,500 square feet of storage space. There are also plans for a second phase of the expansion involving an additional 28,000 square feet.

Groundbreaking for the new building was held earlier this month.

You must be 55 to get $125,000 break on sale of home

That $125,000 homeowner's tax break -- you can apply for it before you die and without selling your home? Also, what is the legal age to become a senior citizen? 55, 62, 65? This is always so confusing.

You can join the American Association of Retired Persons at 55. For a discount at a drug store one must be 60. Social security retirement is available at 62. You're right -- how do you know when you're finally really grown-up?

For the special tax treatment many people are asking about -- the one-time chance to take up to $125,000 profit on the sale of your long-time home, free of any federal income tax -- the minimum age is 55. You can use this yourself; it's not available to your heirs. And if you haven't sold, you don't have any profit to exempt from taxation.

Finch elected president of PMAT

Joan Finch, purchasing manager of Stihl Incorporated, was recently elected president of the Purchasing Management Association of Tidewater, Inc. PMAT is an organization which brings professionals together to discuss various problems encountered in purchasing. A native of Three Rivers, Michigan, Finch has worked for Stihl for four years. Her job entails the purchase of MRO (maintenance, repair, and operation) commodities and capital equipment.

Finch explained the function of the PMAT: "The association is a pooling of expertise of different professionals. We have speakers come in; we sponsor seminars...all in an effort to help one another overcome some of the dilemmas encountered in our daily jobs."

Also a member of the Lake

Rising mortgage rates push housing indicators downwards

WASHINGTON, D.C. --Despite slight increases in housing activity over the past month, housing indicators published by the National Association of Home Builders continued to edge downward, largely in response to rising interest rates.

"We can be fairly optimistic about housing this year, although we would not be surprised to see a drop-off in activity this fall," said NABD President Pete Herder. "But over the longer-term, high interest rates are devastating to the American home builder and the American home buyer."

Herder said that mortgage revenue bonds restored by Congress this summer would help to offset higher rates for moderate-income home buyers, funding as many as 100,000 new single-family homes this year.

NAHB's Builder composite index of leading housing indicators declined in June for the fourth consecutive month, reaching its lowest point since January, 1983, when the current housing recovery was just getting underway.

The Builder Index, created for Builder Magazine by NAHB's Economics Division, is a monthly composite of seven major housing variables.

13.8 percent in May to 14.4 percent in June.

NAHB also recorded a drop in its Housing Affordability Index, from 81.9 in this year's first quarter to 79.6 in the second quarter, despite gains in family

Virginia Beach Federal names Evans vp/controller

VIRGINIA BEACH -- Johnny G. Evans has been promoted to vice president/controller for Virginia Beach Federal Savings and Loan. The announcement was made recently by William L. Owens, president of the firm.

In his new capacity, Evans will supervise the Accounting Department, prepare budgets, establish procedures in accounting and direct the training of accountants for the company. He was formerly controller.

Evans resides in Norfolk and has been with Virginia Beach Federal since January, 1984.

Virginia Beach Federal Savings and Loan has assets in excess of $509 million representing a 44.7 percent increase since year-end 1983. Founded in 1935, Virginia Beach Federal operates five branches in Virginia Beach serving depositors throughout the United States.

Evans

The index dropped from 77 in May to 74.8 in June, down from 83.38 percent last August. The index bottomed out at 40.92 in December, 1981, and reached a peak of 102.33 in May, 1978.

A substantial increase in mortgage rates and a decline in builder expectations and traffic through new subdivisions were the principal causes of a further index decline. The average commitment rate on fixed-rate Ginnie Mae mortgages climbed from income. Chiefly to blame were higher mortgage rates and rising home prices. The median price of a new home climbed from $78,100 in the first quarter to $79,600 in the second quarter.

Although new home sales rose slightly in June to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 620,000, the unsold inventory of homes rose from a 6.6 month to a 6.8 month supply. This was the highest unsold inventory since August, 1982.

Festival countdown—
just six weeks to go!

to sixty of the Krewe's 500 members will travel to Virginia Beach along with four floats.

The 1984 Neptune Festival, in keeping with its "Say It With Music" theme, has incorporated many musical events into this year's Festival. In addition to the participation by Al Hirt, the Festival has added a band competition with many of the top high school marching bands on the east coast contributing their talents.

Although the Festival officially begins on September 26, there will be several pre-Festival events including a flight demonstration on the oceanfront on Saturday, September 22; an air show at the Naval Air Station Oceana on Sunday, September 23; a Festival Healthfest at Virginia Beach General Hospital and the Second Annual Sandman Triathlon.

Events scheduled for the September 26-30 Festival are a Senior Citizen's Golf Tournament, Ball, and Senior Citizen's Appreciation Day; the Prayer Breakfast, to be held on September 28; the Saturday, September 29th Parade; and Heritage Day on September 30th, featuring ethnic entertainment and food; the popular Sandcastle Classic; Country Fair Day; a 5K Run; a Hobie tournament; fireworks competition; square dancing; Volksmarch; wheelchair basketball and tennis; an art show; a photo contest and a number of athletic activities including tennis, golf, volleyball and surfing.

With nearly 40 major events, many new and many which will repeat those popular events of the past, and with over 1,500 volunteers from the City of Virginia Beach, the Neptune Festival indeed promises to be everything it has been in the past and much, much more.

An interview with the mayor

Sun: What are the city's greatest detriments?

Helscher: At the present time, being only 20 years old and growing as rapidly as we have, we are behind in keeping our roads up, so that we cannot travel as freely as we wish. Of course, everything is relative. People come in from other areas and say it's God's country compared to New York.

Sun: Describe what you feel is your function as mayor of Virginia Beach.

Helscher: Number one, to chair meetings and moderate. I represent the city at many functions and on committees. Essentially, the mayor has...I only have one vote like any other Councilperson.

Sun: You have been described as being aligned with the business sector of City Council. Is this a fair generalization?

Helscher: I am a businessman. Yes, I'm business oriented to the extent that, generically speaking, what's good for business is what's good for the city. The tax base of the city is very much dependent on our ability to attract commerce. To me, the function of Council is similar to the members of a Board of Directors trying to efficiently run a business.

Sun: What have been some of the issues that have concerned you most during your time on council?

Helscher: Water. Certainly road formulas. In Richmond, our state delegation has worked extremely hard. Our legislators are cognizant of our problem, but there is still a severe challenge to increase the piece of the state pie.

Sun: You mentioned the water problem. Would you elaborate?

Helscher: We have conducted study after study to determine what the best source will be and have determined it to be Lake Gaston. We are at the point now where we have made the decision and now have to adopt a financing plan. It's very important to get all the approvals necessary as quickly as possible. It's important so far as the standpoint of continued growth and tax base. How do you live without water?

Sun: A number of people are wary of the future of Virginia Beach—afraid that overpopulation will set in. Is this fear justified?

Helscher: I think there's a possibility. Well...the whole world is overpopulated (laughs). Virginia Beach is an attractive place to live and yes, there is absolutely a possibility that we, like the rest of the world, will be overpopulated.

Sun: What kind of aspirations do you have for the future, politically?

Helscher: None. This is it. My only political aspirations are to support those candidates whose philosophies I share.

Sun: In 1982, when you were defeated by one vote, 6-5, for mayor, you were reported to have reacted bitterly to some of those voting against you. Why did you act in that manner, and was it justified?

Helscher: Promises were broken. That's all.

Sun: You have been quoted as saying, "Winning is everything." What exactly do you mean by that and how do you relate it to your politics?

Helscher: That statement belongs more in an athletic arena. At West Point, as you go into the sports complex, a sign reads, "It's not whether you win or lose, it's how you play the game." I happen not to agree with that policy. Whatever you compete for in life, there is no substitute for victory. Morality must play a part in it; you don't have to chop your opponent. I play hard and wake up the next morning, I'm cleaned. If you do what's right, you don't have to look back over your shoulder.

Sun: How would you compare this year's mayoral election compared to 1982? Was there anything you did differently that you feel enhanced your election?

Helscher: No. I would have liked to have won in '82, but I put the loss behind me and tried to be productive. I don't question good fortune, I just accept it.

Sun: What most attracted you to the job of mayor?

Helscher: (Laughs) That's a very subjective question. My wife even asked me the same question. I was born in poverty and achieved everything on my own. My competitive nature drove me to reach plateaus in sports and education. I just want to climb the highest rung on the ladder.

Sun: What will Harold Helscher do for Virginia Beach that no mayor before him has done?

Helscher: Well, I'm sure every mayor before me has attempted to do most of the things I will try to do. I would hope I could accelerate our very good relationship with our state and national delegations. While it's not any easy job, with an 11-member council, it would be best to exchange the maximum amount of dialogue so that we can approach these issues we've already talked about. I've always been able to pull a group of people together. I would like to think I can do it with this Council. It will not be easy, but I'm going to try.

said that a lot of businesses which are not public utilities would love a 15 percent return on equity. He said 15 percent is adequate for a company which has the protection of being a public utility.

The access charge, which relates to the access to other systems as a result in the break-up of telephone services, is a matter for the Federal Communications Commission to decide, Mayor Harold Helscher said, although SCC input will be taken into consideration.

The rate changes alone would increase the monthly rate for residential customers from $2.50 to $7.80 and for business customers from $4.40 to $37.65.

The resolution was requested by Councilwoman Barbara Henley.

Applicant disclosure sought

Virginia Beach City Councilman Robert G. Jones thinks Council and the public should know who is behind a particular application for rezoning.

Jones said that when an application is made by one entity for another who is not revealed, the outcome can be embarrassing. He said that he was considering introducing an ordinance change which would require the disclosure of the contract purchaser; the individual who will purchase the property contingent on the grantings of a rezoning request.

The discussion arose during the consideration of an amendment change to the Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance to bring it into conformance with the State Code. Council approved, by a vote of 10-1 the change, which would permit a zoning change application to be initiated by the contract purchaser with the owner's written consent, or the owner's duly authorized agent. The original ordinance permitted only the owner to initiate the zoning.

Vice Mayor Reba McClanahan dissented.

City Attorney Dal Binson said the city had no choice but to follow the State Code.

R. Jones pointed out that while the ordinance is mandatory, it is not mandatory what the contract purchaser be disclosed.

Zuni man impressed by fast classified

Not only are our classified ads effective - they're fast!

Ask Mr. Richard Slate of Zuni, Va., 40 miles from Chesapeake.

Mr. Slate placed an ad to sell several different dogs that he had. When the ad came out, Mr. and Mrs. Slate were kidding each other about how long it would take to sell the dogs. Two or three minutes later, their phone rang. A long distance call about the dogs, a hour and a half later, two dogs had been sold.

The folks at the Chesapeake Post appreciate the confidence of Mr. Slate as his ad will remain in the post to sell the rest of his dogs and other area people and businesses in our classified ads.

And we are happy to see yet another sign that our papers reach readers all across Tidewater, in this case 40 miles or more from Chesapeake.

And we're especially pleased to see such results.

Our classified ads reach thousands of families from Chesapeake to Zuni, from Virginia Beach to Portsmouth. And classified ads work!

believes that the festival is helping to educate the cultural tastes of area citizens. It is good sense deShields believes, that Hampton Roads should have its own Shakespeare festival. There are some 36 annual Shakespearean festivals held in major cities throughout the country. "We are adding a necessary ingredient to the cultural life of this area," deShields also points out that his festival, now in its third season, is becoming a viable part of the Beach's tourist industry. "We benefit the entire community."

Concerning competition from the Williamsburg festival, deShields does not see a problem. "We can actually work together. Our approaches are quite different, and we are careful not to produce the same plays in the same year." deShields hopes that the two festivals can someday become associated, maybe offering a season ticket that includes both festivals' performances.

"All theatres benefit by an increase in local theatre activity," the director summed up.

Banks elected vice president

Dr. Scott D. Banks, a Virginia Beach chiropractor, was elected vice-president of the Virginia Chiropractors Association at their recent business meeting in Richmond.

Dr. Banks served as president of the Chiropractic Society of Virginia from 1980-1982. Through his efforts, and those of Dr. James B. Seeber of Richmond, the Society merged with the Virginia Chiropractors Association, forming a single, unified organization representing the chiropractic profession in Virginia. Drs. Banks and Seeber were jointly honored as "Chiropractor of the Year" by the Virginia Chiropractors Association in 1982 for their efforts to unify the profession in Virginia.

Dr. Banks practices at the Virginia Beach Back Pain and Headache Clinic on Great Neck Road.

drainage because of the planned expansion of First Colonial Avenue - but this won't start until 1988.

Joyce's fears were a natural outgrowth of experiences with similar establishments in the neighborhood.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley asked whether there was anything Council could do to get existing establishments to clean up their property. "We have to clean up our act," she said.

Planning Director Robert Scott said that it is a matter of how much the city can enforce. He said he is not convinced the code should be changed.

Conditions-in this case, a high fence, an enclosure for the cars, a limit to the number of the cars to 15 and to the permit for one year-should be applied to everyone, Henley said.

The permit was approved by a 11-0 vote with all the conditions.

Works by Sandra Martin at municipal center

On display at the Virginia Beach Municipal Center for the month of August are the paintings of area artist Sandra Martin. The monthly show is exhibited in the second floor corridor of the city building at Courthouse Drive and Northland Road, as a service to city employees and citizens of the area.

Martin, a native of Bracey, Virginia, studied under Cheryl Goldsteger at the University of Georgia. She has always had a natural talent for drawing, but only recently began painting. The eight oil-on-canvas paintings shown are from her "Meditation" series. "Each painting comes from deep inside me," Martin said. "In a reverie state I suddenly see these flowers-mandala shapes. The image stays right on the edge of my consciousness until I paint it, and then I feel almost free."

Color is especially important to

Martin. The colors surrounding her have a significant influence on her everyday life as well as her paintings. The bright vivid hues of the concentric geometric shapes that form the flowers give a feeling of free-flowing energy that signifies life.

Martin has had two one-woman shows in Athens, Georgia, and participated in a Visionary Art Show held at the Fellowship Center in Virginia Beach. Her art will appear in the September/October issue of the new age magazine New Realities.

The show at the Municipal Center will begin display through the end of August. The exhibition is free and open to the public between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Free health screening

NDC Medical Center, located at 850 Kempsville Road in Norfolk, will hold a free screening for diabetes and high blood pressure on Wednesday, August 22 from 1 to 4 p.m. Results will be available immediately. The clinic is held the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month. To register, Beach people should call 466-5900.

Picnic for hearing impaired

The Tidewater Association for Hearing Impaired Children will have their annual picnic on Saturday, August 18, at Bayville Park in Virginia Beach, from 3:30 p.m. until sunset. Those having a hearing impaired or deaf member in their family may come out and get to know others in the community having similar handicaps.

Bayville Park is located near the intersection of Shore Drive and 1st Court Road, near Bayville Farms. A picnic lunch is suggested. Drinks, paper products and charcoal will be provided.

For additional information contact Joyce Laine, 497-8012 (voice only) or Kathy Straight, 464-9273 (voice or TTY).

Money slated for history moved to housing rehab

A $10,000 allocation of Community Development funds which was to be used for a target area history project was transferred to housing rehabilitation by Virginia Beach City Council recently.

The change was among amendments to the plan involving $1,017,993 in Community Development funds.

Other amendments call for the expenditure of $15,000 for Tidewater Community College Senior Citizen Video Tapes, $30,000 for a target area land use plan; and $15,000 for demolition and clearance.

Councilman Louis R. Jones questioned the allocation for history saying that funds should be for housing. Maryann I. Ustick, director of Housing and Community Development suggested the transfer to housing rehabilitation.

Smoke detectors required

All dwelling units now have to have smoke detectors under an ordinance approved by Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon to bring the city code in conformance to the State Code.

The City Code originally required that multi-family residential buildings containing four or more dwelling units install smoke detectors. The amendment requires any buildings with one or more dwelling units to install smoke detectors.

The code also requires that the owner of a dwelling unit that is rented or leased shall furnish the tenant with written certification that all smoke detectors required have been inspected and are in good working order.

Exempted from the ordinance will be any building containing fewer than four dwelling units not in compliance with the ordinance on July 1, 1984, until the unit is sold or rented to another person.

Council goes against city plan to permit rezoning

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

A rezoning in the General Booth Boulevard growth corridor would permit six units per acre in an area where the Comprehensive plan recommends four units. The applicant for the rezoning, however, has agreed to limit by deed restrictions development to four units per acre.

The 50.1-acre parcel is the latest in a series of agricultural-zoned property along the corridor that has been rezoned for residential use. The property, part of the Upton Farm is next door to the Malbon Farm property which was rezoned last November to Pd-H2, a planned unit development.

The property was rezoned Monday afternoon from AG-1 Agricultural District to R-8 Residential District. The Planning Commission had recommended denial.

Council was narrowly divided on the issue—6-5, with those in opposition to the petition filed by Shorewood Associates, Inc. including Vice Mayor Reba McClanan, Councilwomen Barbara Henley and Meyera Oberndorf, and Councilmen Robert G. Jones and Louis R. Jones.

Sheridan Barber, president of the Red Mill Farms Civic League, opposed the application because of the inadequacy of services, principally schools and roads, to keep up with development. He submitted a petition signed by 151 persons in opposition to the change and said that citizens now have a 12-15-year waiting period for the city to catch up with development.

Before the application was approved, a substitute motion made by L. Jones failed by a 5-6 vote with the same division of Council. He said there is a severe overloading of facilities in the General Booth Boulevard corridor and that he was not inclined to support the majority of the applications in the corridor until the new Comprehensive Plan is available.

Henley said that the application supports what she has

Maguire gets nod on Gaston contract

Without discussion, Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon authorized a contract with C.E. Maguire for the architectural and engineering services for the design and construction of the Lake Gaston Water Resource project.

In the 9-2 vote, Councilmen H. Jack Jennings Jr. and Dr. J. Henry McCoy dissented. Jennings had previously objected to the award of the contract on the basis of Maguire's involvement in alleged extortion activities in Boston. An investigation by the city concluded that Maguire had been the victim rather than the perpetrator of the alleged crime.

Maguire's services will cost $1,027,000 including payments to Malcolm Pirnie, associated with Maguire, and to other subcontractors.

New students should enroll immediately

Students new to the Virginia Beach school system or those transferring within the city should enroll as soon as possible at the elementary, junior high, or senior high school to which their neighborhood is assigned. Except in rare cases, this is usually the school nearest the student's residence. The Pupil Personnel

Office (427-4791) has a complete listing of all school attendance zones and can answer questions about specific neighborhood

The quiet man

John Baum, the senior Councilmember, representing Blackwater, admits that he first ventured into politics largely due to the persuasive powers of neighboring civic leaders. And since his initial election in 1972, Baum has swept past all competitors. This year, for instance, he received more than 70 percent of the vote in defeating James E. Snyder.

Ironically though, Baum said he has been "very reluctant" each time re-election has come around. Even more surprising is the fact that the work of civic organizations had led to much of his tentativeness regarding re-election.

Baum feels "one of the biggest obstacles" to City Council's work on the Comprehensive Land Use Plan has been the "polarization of civic groups and builders." The 57-year-old farmer said he is distressed because his work on the plan, as well as the Flood Plain Ordinance, are two of the reasons he decided to run for re-election.

"It bothers me when I see this polarization," Baum said during a recent interview. "Neither group is willing to compromise their side, he said, and this stubbornness has spread onto Council too."

"It seems some members on Council vote to behold one certain builder," he said. "In principle, some always vote for civic (causes), too."

Because of this, Baum has been described as being the most "moderate" of all Council members. Despite the fact he has been involved with farming most of his life, Baum is not afraid to admit that one day, "farmland will have to give way." He says if done correctly, a gradual and well-planned growth is possible in a city headed toward overpopulation.

"The Comprehensive Plan, if revised, could minimize a lot of conflicts," he said. "It's kind of give and take."

It is the "give and take" where Baum sees problems. "There are personality conflicts we may not be able to overcome."

The conflicts are clear cut to Baum. "It's simple, you are either for R.G. Moore or against R.G. Moore." The principle contractor in Virginia Beach, Moore has been linked to a number of rezoning conflicts Council has been involved with recently.

Another concern Baum has is the impression most people have of politicians. "We have a representative democracy," Baum said. "But a large percentage of people want a town hall set up. Crowds are so indigent."

"I refer to it as the Self Gratification School of Democracy," Baum admitted.

Council tackles cat issue

By Lee Cahill

In the old fable the mice had the solution on how to be warned about the approach of a cat.

Put a bell on the cat, said one. But who will put the bell on the cat? asked another.

Now the City of Virginia Beach is in a similar dilemma. City Council approves an ordinance Monday afternoon which requires the immunization of cats against rabies. The idea is to protect the populace against rabies, but how will the ordinance be enforced? Nobody suggested putting a bell on the cats without shots, but Council agreed that to catch a cat violator won't be easy.

During a lighter part of the meeting Council members had a little fun with the ordinance before approving it by a vote of 8-3. Mayor Harold Heischob hailed the move as "one giant step forward among the feline population."

Dissenting were Councilwoman Barbara Henley and Councilmen Robert G. Jones and John A. Baum. They said they did not see how the ordinance could be enforced. Baum, especially, who lives in the country, wondered how the cat population there could be controlled.

Heischob said that dogs usually have owners, but cats often just run wild.

McClanan wanted to know whether the ordinance would require any additional cost to administer.

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck said that the present dog catchers would be used. No one said they would be known as dog and cat catchers, however.

Baum said that animal control has been of no value at his end of the city. He has stated on other occasions that he lives where people drop off pets to get rid of them.

The vaccination was recommended by Dr. George Sjeland, Virginia Beach Health Director, who said there has been numerous outbreaks of rabies among raccoons in northern Virginia, leading to at least nine confirmed cases of rabid cats. He said it is likely the rabid raccoons may migrate in this direction and then spread to some domestic cats which are not immunized.

Although the ordinance was effective on approval, Muehlenbeck said that it would not be en-

Public school workers already back in school

Before students arrive August 27 at Virginia Beach Public Schools, teachers and other employees who have had the summer off will already have begun; they began the new school year on Tuesday, August 21.

School started for more than 200 teachers new to Virginia Beach schools on Monday, August 20 and the returning teachers arrived at their schools the following day. Their orientation began that morning with a meeting at Green Run High School. Dr. E. E. Brickell, superintendent of schools, welcomed new teachers. A multi-image slide/tape show about the city of Virginia Beach and the school system was also shown. The program was produced by the school system's Public Information Office and the Educational Media Center. That afternoon, the new teachers attended meetings at their individual schools.

The week-long orientation continues with new teachers, as well as all returning teachers, reporting to their individual schools for additional briefings and for work in their classrooms. On Thursday, secondary and elementary teachers will attend city-wide meetings for their particular curriculum, and on Friday, all will return to their individual schools to prepare for the arrival of students the following day.

Many of the new teachers received their teaching contract by mail during the summer and did not have the opportunity to learn about all of their job benefits; therefore, the Office of Personnel Services of Virginia Beach Public Schools invited the new teachers to one of three orientation sessions at the School Administration Building earlier in August. In those sessions the teachers learned about opportunities for professional development, insurance and retirement information, payroll and leave, and the teacher certification process.

When school starts for students, about 57,600 youngsters in grades K-12 are expected to show up.

Motorists must stop for school bus unloading or loading

When school opens August 27, Virginia Beach motorists should be aware of their responsibilities when meeting a school bus on the city's highways and streets. State law requires motorists to stop when encountering a school bus loading or unloading students. For example:

•At intersections, all drivers must come to a complete stop. Failure to stop for a stopped school bus with lights flashing at an intersection is a frequent violation, since some motorists don't realize they are required to stop even when approaching a school bus at right angles.

•On undivided highways or streets, all vehicles are required by law to stop and remain so until all children are clear of the roadway and the bus is again in motion.

•On divided highways or streets, vehicles in all lanes traveling in the same direction as the bus must come to a complete stop, but those traveling in an opposite direction and separated by either a physical barrier or an unpaved area may proceed without stopping.

Failure to stop for a school bus loading or unloading children is a reckless driving charge and is punishable by a maximum of $500 fine and/or 12 months in jail.

Virginia Beach school bus drivers are encouraged to report violations of state school bus safety regulations by motorists. These reports are given to the city's Police Department, which then contacts the owners of the reported vehicles. Another example of the police department and traffic engineering department working closely with the school division is the placement of school bus warning signs in areas with repeated violations of school bus safety regulations.

No leaded gasoline

There is overwhelming evidence that lead from gasoline is poison to humans—and young children and pregnant women are especially vulnerable.

Lead poisoning in sufficient concentrations causes brain damage. Without leaded fuels fouling the air, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) estimates the IQs of as many as 4 million children would be raised an average of 2.2 points.

The EPA says that 97,000 children now require medical attention because of high lead content in their bloodstreams—lead that they get from paint and from gasoline. Their medical care costs $1.8 billion a year.

This poisoning of our youth is intolerable. The EPA has pushed to have leaded fuels phased out in eight years. Now it says that is not quick enough. It wants to reduce the use of leaded fuels 91 percent by Jan. 1, 1986, and ban them totally by 1995.

Tetraethyl lead is placed in gasoline because it is a cheap way of boosting the octane rating. It also serves as a valve and valve-seat lubricant and is a required fuel for some cars with high-compression engines built before 1971.

Most cars produced since 1975 are equipped with catalytic converters and are required to use unleaded fuel. It is illegal to run them on leaded gasoline. Nevertheless, about 17 percent of American motorists with post-1975 cars use leaded fuel illegally because it is cheaper.

Most cars built before 1971 run better and have fewer mechanical problems if leaded fuel is used, but those who own these older cars must not stand in the way of getting leaded fuels off the market as quickly as possible. They produce 80 percent of all lead emissions into the air.

The EPA will be conducting hearings on its proposal to phase out leaded fuels Aug. 30 and 31. The lead ban must have public support.

Gobbledygook

Warning: The United States is becoming a bilingual country. English is being supplanted as our common language. Millions of dollars are spent each year to print everything from voter pamphlets to Social Security forms in a language that is unintelligible to the majority of Americans. And what's worse, English-speaking citizens are being penalized for not being bilingual. The second language is not Spanish or Italian or Polish.

It is gobbledygook.

And the government is the worst offender. The New York Times reports that a federal judge in New York has ordered Uncle Sam to stop writing "gobbledygook" to Medicare recipients, who have lost benefits because they couldn't understand forms sent to them.

The judge's ruling said: "The language used is bureaucratic gobbledygook, jargon, double-talk, a form of officialese, federalese and insurancespeak and double-speak. It does not qualify as English."

If you doubt the judge's finding, here's a quote from the 1979 Medicare letter: "Approved charges are determined by each Medicare carrier. The amounts are based on statistics covering customary charges of an individual physician and prevailing rates by all physicians rendering similar services in a locality.

However, increases in prevailing charges for doctor's services are limited from year to year by an 'economic index' formula..." Huh?

Gobbledygook is easy to write, hard to read. Its sources are largely undigested legal and technical jargon combined with an almost perverse compulsion to say too much or too little, leaving the reader confused and powerless to respond.

Periodically, the people fight back against gobbledygook, ordering officials to rewrite a state constitution or a county charter in plain English. But the day after they're published, the bureaucrats are back at work, translating clear English into gobbledygook, so that no one will discover what the law actually says.

Clarity of expression reflects clarity of thought. The battle between English and gobbledygook is a struggle for the true benefits of a democratic society—freedom and law.

If the federal judge finds the scribe who penned the Medicaid letter, he should convict him of gross violation of the English language and sentence him to a year of hard labor, reading federal regulations.

What to know about operating systems

Up to now, I've talked only about the hardware for a home computer system. But the biggest collection of hardware is just a pile of junk without some software to tell it what to do. Software is the general term for programs plus any specialized data they need to run. You will get some software with any computer you buy, but how much you get varies enormously from one manufacturer to another.

In the following columns, there'll be an overview of the general categories of software available for home computers. You may want to consider these and other programs to enhance your system. But none of these will run at all unless you have a central core of software called an operating system.

The Operating System: you can't do much without it

The entire machine is, in a very real sense, under the control of the operating system at all times. It is under control of the operating system that characters typed at the keyboard appear on the CRT screen. The operating system enables a program to read data on a disk. The operating system also controls the flow of data sent to the printer. You may be "running" a word processing program, but the operating system hasn't gone away; the word processor uses subprograms within the operating system to do most all input and output, plus a few other things, too.

The operating systems most widely known are CP/M (Control Program for Microcomputers) developed by Digital Research, and MS-DOS (Microsoft Disk Operating System) developed by Microsoft. This latter is also used, with a few modifications, on the IBM Personal computer. It is then called PC-DOS. These two operating systems run on many different computers, and provide a slight degree of standardization and compatibility from one manufacturer to the next; more on the subject of compatibility in a later column.

Which is best?

Many models of computers sold by Radio Shack do not use either of the above systems; neither do Apple computers. Each of these companies, plus others I haven't mentioned, have their own operating systems. Overall, these proprietary systems are every bit as good as CP/M and MS-DOS—do not choose a system on the reputation of the operating system alone. They all do about the same things with about the same amount of effort.

The only word of caution I can give is that a few manufacturers don't include an operating system in their advertised price. I think that's equivalent to selling a car without an engine! So be sure the price that's quoted to you for a computer includes an operating system.

Coming next: some notes on word processors.

School lunch program offers food variety

When Virginia Beach public schools open August 27, 61 school cafeterias will begin the task of feeding about 25-30,000 hungry students each day, and the lunch prices remain the same as last year.

The Virginia Beach Public School lunch program ensures that each meal each school day fills the nutritional needs of students from first grade through senior high school.

Each lunch—hot or cold—offered to students will have the five basic food components: meat (or alternate), milk, bread (or alternate), fruit, and vegetables. Students in all schools on both the elementary and secondary levels will also be offered choices of lunches again this year.

The school system follows the guidelines of the United States Department of Agriculture in offering a school lunch which supplies the recommended daily nutritional requirements for children of various ages.

Students may participate in the "offer versus serve" provision of the lunch program. "Offer versus serve" lets the students choose three, four, or all five of the meal components; thus, they can refuse foods they don't like, which reduces plate waste and increases student participation in the lunch program.

The 1984-85 lunch price for elementary students will be 60 cents and the price for secondary school lunches will be 70 cents, except 75 cents for the lunch that includes the quarter-pound hamburger. Milk is included in the price of each meal. Students who bring their lunches may buy milk separately, and all will have a choice of either low-fat or regular whole milk. Kindergarten may purchase snacks for 20 cents each day. All adult lunches will cost $1. Lunch will be served beginning on the first day of school for students.

Applications for free or reduced lunch rates are expected to be distributed at the beginning of the school year and will be available in each school office throughout the school year.

Bats in the Belfry...

Although bats are among the most relentlessly persecuted animals on Earth, Europeans recognize their beneficial value to man as pollinators of fruit and nut trees, dispersers of seeds and predators of pesky insects.

Bats are legally protected in all European countries as well as in Russia. In fact, thousands of bat "houses" have been placed in national forests throughout Europe, especially in England.

Animal behavior novel or not?

After the age of four or five, I was totally unimpressed with animal stories. While I had been an avid devotee of Winnie the Pooh, Wind in the Willows was not my cup of tea. Black Beauty, offered by a hopeful parent to soothe me through the mumps, left me unsoothed. The common girlish spate of horse and dog stories were ignored in favor of biographies and historical novels. Becoming a librarian did little to expand my personal reading tastes. I steadfastly refused to be intrigued by the likes of Water-ship Down. It was fine, but it was for others.

Books

By Carolyn Powell

As if to prove that all things happen in their own good time, however, this summer has found my interest caught almost reluctantly by two novels by William Horwood. One day in July, suffering from that peculiar malaise which occurs when a book has ended before one is ready to relinquish its hold on one's life and before another has begun to create its spell, I browsed through the Bayside Area Library's new books—Horwood's The Stonor Eagles caught my eye. Glancing at the blurb, I must admit that it appealed to me simply because it mentioned the Isle of Skye which I had visited several months previously. Willing to read anything dealing with that setting, I opened to Chapter One. I was quickly caught up in a moving story which juxtaposes a legendary tale of sea eagles and their fight for survival with a story of an artist whose work and life is shadowed by the eagles' spirit and image. I quickly found myself fascinated by the artist, by the birds and their interwoven stories. Horwood's descriptive talents make the landscape a living entity and a reader actually seems to soar in flight with the eagles. Jonathan Livingston Seagull may leap, or in order not to mix the metaphor, fly into mind, but in comparison, Jonathan lacks the power evident in Horwood's pages. I found the book difficult to put down and I was unready to stop when I reached the last page.

After completing The Stonor Eagles and while beginning to plan this column, I located William Horwood's earlier novel, Dunston Wood. Set in a large "system" of moles under a wood in England, this book was harder going and at first I had difficulty in feeling empathy for moles. The style is perhaps more forced than in the Eagles with the need to use such phrases as "anybody else" in place of "anybody else" and to portray moles who occasionally speak with Cockney accents or in Gaelic rhyme. Perhaps it's that eagles are somehow more elegant or majestic than moles who eat worms and "snout around" in beach leaf mold.

After some chapters of purposeful reading, however, the charm of the characters, the setting and the rich, almost Arthurian fantasy which surrounds them caught me up in the story. I found myself reading "anybody" or "somebody" without flinching. There is a wonderfully real depiction of a chaotic library in the moles' holy place which is worth the entire reading in itself.

William Horwood brings the British landscape startlingly alive and portrays animal species, both the high and low, in such a realistic manner that a reader will probably always view them in a richer light. I recommend both books for an enjoyable fall's reading.

They came from outer space!

Or at the very least from out of town

By Toni Lohmann

Special To The Sun

Roger Jones was concerned about his car. As the rookie member of Silver Star Squadron, a "Battlestar Galactica" role playing group, he had been assigned to man a table filled with flyers for various science fiction fan clubs at the Galacon I science fiction convention. But his car, which he had spent four months airbrushing with scenes from "Battlestar Galactica" was on display in the next room, and he wanted to keep an eye on it.

Convention goers were looking not only at Jones' car, the "Cosmic Cuda", but at science fiction movies, posters, paintings, the assorted scarlet and white uniforms of Trekkies, and the multihued gowns and cloaks of the members of the Free Companions Medievalist Society.

Michael Khandelwal, the 14 year old mastermind of Galacon I organized the convention because it was "something to do". An avid science fiction reader, Michael had attended several other "cons", science fiction lingo for conventions, and had organized a one day program in 1983, called Minicon. Galacon I, which was held last weekend at Pavilion, was a much bigger project, with over 400 people registered, some coming from as far away as New York and Pennsylvania.

The main attraction for many convention goers was the presence of Richard Hatch from "Battlestar Galactica" and Walter Koenig from "Star Trek." They gave several presentations during the convention, answering such questions as "What's your favorite episode?" and signing autographs.

Koenig, who played Ensign Chekov in "Star Trek," has attended over one hundred science fiction conventions and finds that they give him a chance to meet people. Conventions provide "people who, because of their interests, might be considered different, an opportunity to fraternize and share their feelings."

In addition to actors, author Robert Asprin, the editor of the Thieves World anthologies, and Now you see her, now you don't.

science fiction illustrator Kelly Freas, lectured on such topics as "Why Violence" and "How to Get Published."

But lectures were just part of the action. The gaming rooms were the center of intense concentration, as a Star Fleet Battles tournament got underway. At three tables players threw dice, moved markers and argued over how many times a ship's docking device could be activated during a contest. In the next room the game of Morrow was beginning. This role playing game, similar to the popular Dungeons and Dragons is set in a world devastated by a nuclear war, and its players, each with special talents and characteristics, must work as a team to survive.

Displayed in the next room were art works in all shapes, sizes, styles and media. Posters of award winning cover art by Kelly Freas, limited edition prints by Randal Spangler of whimsical little dragons bathing in teacups, and a boldly designed oil painting by Tim Melden entitled "Guy Fighting Bald Midgets" gave the room an exotic flavor. Not surprisingly, the most popular subjects were portraits of "Star Trek" characters, done in every media from marking pens to air brush.

If the art work was beyond the means of many convention goers, the Hucksters Room offered a bonanza of comic books, pins, stickers, "Star Trek" blasters, posters, pictures and old TV Guides (containing stories about favorite stars).

Handcrafted ceramics and needlework by Earle Phillips and Ginger McGuinness of West Columbia, S.C. stood out from the mass-produced items being offered at the convention. Among their wares were goblets portraying characters from the fantasy works of Andre Norton, patterns for jewel-toned metallic dragons done in cross stitch and a ceramic chess set in which each piece was designed to represent a character from Tolkien's Lord of the Rings. According to McGuinness, much care went into determining which character from the books would become which chess piece. "The characters chosen to be pawns were all pawns in the stories, they all came under the influence of someone or something else."

Some costumes were very intriguing. Kerri Wheeler of Baltimore, Maryland and Elissa Dipalo of Virginia Beach were the mirror image of each other; one side all black and one side all white. They were characters from an episode of Star Trek, said Elissa, "but I don't know which one. Just ask anyone in a Star Trek uniform and they will be able to tell you." Kerri, who made the costumes, did it because the convention sounded interesting and "I wanted to get all involved in it."

First-time convention goer, Steve Asman of Fort Eustis, Virginia was attending Galacon I with a group of friends. He summed up the whole convention experience aptly when he stated that a con is "a concentration of very interesting people."

Camp Pendleton

Surf championship enters 22nd year

By Barbara Ann Turner

Staff Writer

Surf's up! Or so it is hoped for August 25 and 26 when the Virginia Beach Jaycees will host the 22nd annual East Coast Surfing Championships. For two decades Virginia Beach has been home to the second oldest surfing contest in the world. Ron Swan, of Island Water Sports, characterizes the competition as "an all out end of the summer celebration."

Over 250 amateur and some 50 professional surfers are expected to compete in the two day event. "Professional surfers will be coming from all over the world to compete," explained Swan, winner of the Jaycee Division title last year. Pro Surf will be on hand to coordinate and judge the professional contest, while Eastern Surfing Association representatives will officiate competition in the amateur divisions. Professional surfers will be competing for a purse totaling $4,500. First through fifth place winners in both contests will be awarded trophies and prizes.

The competition will be held at Camp Pendleton Beach beginning at 7 a.m. on Saturday, 6 a.m. on Sunday, and will run through completion. Admission is free, as is bus service from parking areas to the beach. Amateur surfers will compete in a number of divisions: men, further divided into age groups, women, Longboard, where the boards are at least three feet taller than the surfers; and the Jaycee Event. Bodyboard and 400 meter Paddleboard race competitions are new this year.

Surfing prowess will not be the only thing contested this weekend. Bikini and Hotbuns contests are also scheduled. Miss E.C.S.C. and her Court will be among those enjoying the festivities. Mimes, breakdancers, and four different rock and roll bands will keep crowds entertained during the day.

The contest has had its ups and downs, according to Swan. It suffered a serious slump during the late '70's, but, explained Swan, "The last five years have seen a steady rise in the popularity of the event."

Local surf shop owners have also noticed an increase in the number of local surfers. They estimate there may be as many as 25 thousand surfers in Hampton Roads. "This contest has attracted all of the big names," Swan recounted the appearances of such greats as Corky Carroll and Dewy Weber. He expects nothing less of this year's competition as professional surfers travel from as far away as Australia. "All we can do now is hope for fine weather and good surf."

Why Virginia Beach loves those tourists

Virginia Beach recently reported net revenues of $10,332,017 a year directly related to tourism at the beach.

In an "Analysis of Tourist-related Revenues and Expenses in the City of Virginia Beach" for the past fiscal year recently released, the Research Division of the Finance Department estimates direct revenues to the city at $16,094,711 and direct expenditures by the city at $5,762,694, leaving a revenue side difference of $10,332,017.

The study points out that the impact is actually greater because only the "direct" revenues and expenses are addressed in the study, which includes Atlantic Avenue from 1st through 89th Streets, Pacific Avenue, the side streets, between Atlantic and Pacific Avenues, and the North End.

Tourist spending, generating the revenues, was estimated at $240 million for the year. Of that figure, approximately $17 million was spent by foreign travelers, $213 million by overnight U.S. visitors and the remainder by beach day and evening visitors.

Major sources of the revenues are hotel room taxes, restaurant meal taxes and sales taxes, as well as real estate taxes, personal property taxes and business licenses from tourist-related businesses.

Voter registration

Authorities in the Virginia Beach Voter Registrar's Office are seeking to make registration easier for local citizens. They will be holding a voter Registration Drive in front of the Farm Fresh Supermarket on Constitution Drive, across from the Pembroke Shopping Center, from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. on Saturday, August 25. With local, state, and national elections coming up in November, it is important to register as soon as possible.

For further information concerning registration or the current registration drive, contact Peggy Van Nieuwenhuise at 464-3073 or Ruth Kates at 490-2190.

Moore donation

Developer R. G. Moore has contributed $24,000 to the Department of Parks and Recreation for the development of Rosemont Forest Park. The 26-acre park site also was dedicated to the city by Moore.

City Council formally accepted the funds recently.

Ten month job

Drive a school bus?

There is a continuing need for both permanent and substitute school bus drivers for Virginia Beach Public Schools because of transfers, retirements, or emergencies.

Starting salary for a full-time driver fulfilling a single assignment this year is $1,900 for a ten-month year. A full-time driver makes as many as three round-trip runs (elementary, junior high, and senior high) each school day. Special trips or additional routes earn extra money; liberal fringe benefits are available.

Substitutes can earn from $10.50 to $26.50 a day, depending on how many routes are driven.

The hours are attractive to mothers and/or fathers because the drivers leave and arrive home about the same time as their children. Also, school bus drivers play an important role in school activities.

Requirements for a school bus driver include a good driver record, a valid Virginia driver's license, an ability to shift a vehicle's gears, and three references.

Prospective school bus drivers receive free complete driver training and safety instruction. This includes classroom and behind-the-wheel instruction. The training period is determined by the individual's aptitude.

Once the training is completed, a driver must pass a local written and behind-the-wheel test, as well as a three-part (eye, written, and driving) Department of Motor Vehicles test, to receive the special license required to drive a school bus in Virginia.

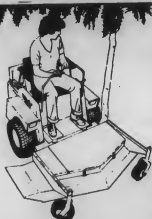

To apply for a position as a regular or substitute school bus driver, Beach people should call the Virginia Beach Public Schools' Transportation Department at 428-9388 or 428-0355.

Reeger and The Bull invade Virginia Beach

By Samuel Martinette, Jr.
 Reeger and "The Bull" for breakfast? Sounded like high caloric intake to me, I mused when the call came in from WNOR-FM 99 inviting The Sun to cover the breakfast party at the home of Rick and Kelly Vogel of Virginia Beach. It would be a tough assignment, facing the acerbic wit of the top-rated-morning-drive-time dangerous duo. I went down my list of feature writers to see who I was tired of, then decided that any editor with moxie would take the job himself. So I did.

I knew the basic facts of the case already. Ron Reeger and Henry DelToro were conducting a "Breakfast Party" in the back yard of the winners of a write-in contest. Rick Vogel had dashed off a poem inviting the two jocks over for strawberry margaritas and burritos at dawn. The entry was selected over several hundred tear jerking epistles and lo, the Vogels had their breakfast on the radio.

Ben Franklin the puppy danced around my legs as I milled my way through the crowd to reach Kelly Vogel.

"It's great," Kelly said, speaking over the roar of the blender as "The Bull" deafened his audience, cackling with glee.

"When Ron Reeger called and said we had won I began calling up friends and telling people what to bring. It wasn't too hard figuring out who to invite. Our biggest surprise was when my dad called this morning to say he had heard I was having a party. I didn't know he listened to FM 99!"

Out in the yard Reeger was chasing the dog (or the dog was chasing Reeger, I wasn't sure who had started it). Numerous friends and relatives milled about the place sipping at margaritas. I asked Rick Vogel how a nice guy like him got mixed up in a business like this.

"I write stuff like that poem all the time. When I heard about the contest I couldn't see writing a letter begging and pleading. As an industrial hygienist I get letters like that from businesses asking me to leave them alone. So I wrote that poem and offered the guys a drink."

While Henry was talking one of the neighbor kids into tossing Ben Franklin the puppy into the pool to see if he could swim, I asked Ron Reeger what had made Rick Vogel's poem a winner.

"It was the burritos," Reeger replied. "The burritos made it a very convincing letter."

They were lining up to wash the dishes in the kitchen to earn a WNOR-FM 99 t-shirt. Ron and Henry were taunting the audience because they didn't know where we were and couldn't be there. The sun rose high over the scraggly corn in Kelly and Rick's back yard. Their son Chris, 3, watched the proceedings from his perch in the pool, never cracking a smile. He looked like the kind of guy who had already seen it all. I had another margarita because it seemed like the thing to do.

The Beach Boys to appear at Busch Gardens for Labor Day celebration

Busch Gardens, The Old Country, celebrates Labor Day with concerts by The Beach Boys at the park's Royal Palace Theatre on Monday, September 3, at 2 p.m. and 5 p.m.

The Beach Boys, known as the longest running original member band in rock 'n' roll history, have sung their songs about surfing, sun, and pretty girls for 24 years. They performed for 23 years with the same lineup intact — until the tragic accidental drowning death of Dennis Wilson in December 1983.

The Beach Boys, now including brothers Brian and Carl Wilson, cousin Mike Love and friends Al Jardine and Bruce Johnston, continue to sing their lush, layered harmonies to a third generation of fans.

They are the same individuals that ventured into a West Coast studio in 1961 and produced "Surfin'," a tune that singlehandedly created the "California Sound" of the early '60s. And now in 1984, after 35 albums, 14 of them gold, The Beach Boys show no signs of slowing down.

The Beach Boys are riding the '80s with the same emotional fervor as the two decades before. Beach Boys' fans can look forward to an all-new Beach Boys studio album in the near future, as well as a two-hour authorized video biography.

Admission to The Beach Boys concerts at Busch Gardens is $4, in addition to the single park admission price of $13.95 which includes all rides, regularly scheduled park shows, in-park transportation and attractions.

Tickets may be purchased inside the park during a visit to Busch Gardens up to 30 days prior to a show. Tickets are also available by mail, The Coliseum Mall in Hampton or at The Royal Palace Theatre's ticket booth in the park.

To order by mail, purchasers should indicate the desired show or shows, number of tickets and price category, and should send a check or money order for the appropriate amount to Busch Gardens, The Old Country, P.O. Box FJ, Williamsburg, Va., 23187. Concerts are subject to change without notice.

Tickets are available on a first-come, first-serve basis, with people ordering tickets receiving the best available seating. For more concert information call 804/253-3227.

Rare mantelpiece castlelets added to Colonial Williamsburg's collection

Colonial Williamsburg has acquired a pair of rare castlelets — a candlestick designed for use as a mantel ornament — made in South Staffordshire, England, about 1765.

The castlelets, which were often used as decorative objects, are made so that the finials may be turned upside down converting them to candlesticks. The highly decorative pieces feature a beautifully painted polychrome landscape within rococo reserves and are set off by a white ground embellished with gilt.

This recent acquisition adds significantly to the foundation's collection of English enamelware which heretofore contained only a few diminutive items of aesthetic and historic quality but, except for a few pair of important candlesticks, has not included anything of size or quality.

With the DeWitt Wallace Decorative Arts Gallery scheduled to open in June 1984, curators want to improve the holding of enamelware to achieve a balance of quality compared to the other collections of porcelain and metal shown in the new museum.

Enameling in the form of champ-levé and cloisonné has been practiced in Europe and China for many years. It was in the middle of the 18th century, however, that this ware was first introduced into England at Battersea, now a part of London. It was discovered that an opaque white

State Fair of Virginia offering discount in exchange for newspapers for recycling

When the State Fair of Virginia opens on Thursday, September 20, there will be a $2 reduction in the price of admission if Fairgoers bring a stack of old newspapers about three feet high or 100 lbs. to entrance gate 4 or 6 at the Fair Grounds.

This unique entry fee is part of a Paper Recycling Day being hosted by the State Fair of Virginia, West End Recycling of Richmond and the Paper Recycling Committee of the American Paper Institute.

Individuals bringing a 3-foot stack of old newspapers should follow signs that say "paper recycling" to the locations where they will be given a $2 discount coupon which can be used at the admissions gate towards the $6.95 Superticket or the senior citizens' discount ticket. And, as further incentive to potential paper recyclers, special up-front parking will be provided.

"By exchanging old newspapers for the $2 discount coupon, the State Fair of Virginia wants to help show how valuable old newspapers are," said C.L. Teachworth, executive vice president of the Fair. "We're pleased to have the opportunity to demonstrate the importance of paper recycling to the community. Continued paper recycling can help reduce city waste disposal costs and earn income from newspaper recycling," he said. After the opening day recycling drive, old newspaper will be purchased for cash at West End Recycling and at other Virginia wastepaper dealers listed in the yellow pages under "wastepaper."

Mr. Teachworth noted that Virginia's Fair will be the first in the nation to offer discounts to individuals joining in the special paper recycling effort.

The theme of the 1984 Fair is "A Salute to America," and the Fair will focus attention on the fact that old newspapers are one of the country's valuable resources. Governor Charles S. Robb is recognizing September 20th as Virginia "Paper Recycling Day."

A special collection point for the papers will be established at the north end of Parking Lot G on Recycling Day, recycling bins and personnel from West End Recycling Center will be available to help collect all of the newspapers from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. This special parking area is close by the midway and many of the special exhibition areas.

Lease-option way of selling homes popular again

Real Estate
By Roger Pyle

Home buyers and sellers are dusting off an old sales technique and taking it out of the closet in light of recent sluggish property sales across the country.

But they are adding a new degree of sophistication to the lease-option method of selling homes that involves attorneys, trust accounts and written contracts. Under the arrangement, the buyer signs a lease with the seller to rent the property. Part of the rent is credited toward a down payment. When enough money is accumulated, the renter then purchases the property for the agreed upon price. If the buyer backs out of the deal, the rent is forfeited.

Leases average between six months and a year. But buyers and sellers have added new twists to lease options to protect each other.

Sellers are requiring purchasers to pay considerably more than the market rent for the house to give purchasers an incentive to go through with the sale.

Otherwise, sellers will end up with renters with no intention of purchasing the house and property that sits on the market for a long period of time.

For example, a house that usually would rent for $350 a month is leased to the purchaser for $475. The extra $125 is credited toward the down payment. In other cases, sellers will ask buyers to pay rent equal to their mortgage payments. In return, the sellers will add some of their own money to the buyer's down payment.

Another way to increase credits toward down payments is through sweat equity.

While leasing the house, the buyer can make major improvements such as adding rooms or building a garage. The appraised value of the work is credited toward the down payment, he said.

Buyers also need protection in lease-option deals.

The part of the rent credited toward the down payment should be placed in a trust account so that the seller doesn't spend the money too quickly or stop making mortgage payments on the house.

Real estate brokers say the agreements should be spelled out in writing and should detail who will make repairs during the lease period and who will pay the utility bills.

Lease options are primarily aimed at first-time home buyers who can afford large monthly payments, but are several thousand dollars short on a down payment.

Stihl sponsors vendor appreciation day

Stihl Incorporated recently sponsored a Vendor Appreciation Program in Virginia Beach. The two-day event was given in honor of various vendors with whom Stihl does business throughout the year. Representatives from such companies as DuPont, Cavalier Sportswear, and International Packings Corporation were among those in attendance.

room where they gathered to socialize and relax until the evening's activities got underway. That night, Orion's Rot served as the setting for dinner. The post-dinner festivities included a welcoming speech from Dale Hines, purchasing manager, and a talk from Materials Manager William C. Wanner.

Following breakfast the next morning, the visitors left for a tour of the nearby Stihl plants. Upon completion of the tour, the group made its way to a demonstration area set up with various Stihl consumer and professional products. Later that afternoon, the visitors returned to the Cavalier and attended a marketing and advertising presentation followed by a question and answer session. The vendor group had dinner that evening in the Cavalier's Pocahontas Room and the night was concluded with an address from Stihl President, Fred Noe and a vendor awards ceremony.

Students may rent textbooks

Students in all Virginia Beach public schools may participate in the textbook rental and instructional fee plan; a single payment at the beginning of the school year covers books and instructional materials.

Participation in the plan is optional; that is, students not wishing to take part in the rental and fee plan may purchase all texts and will pay applicable instructional or materials fees. Partial or selective participation in the rental plan is not possible.

Schools will not maintain an inventory of books for sale; therefore, anyone wishing to purchase the texts instead of participating in the rental plan must place an order at the school the student will attend; payment must be made at the time the order is placed.

On the elementary school level, the rental fee is $11 for grades 1 and 2, $12 for grades 3, 4, and 5, $13 for grade 6, and $17 for grade 7. For kindergartners, there is a $6 instructional materials fee.

In the junior high schools, students in grades 7, 8, and 9 will pay $5 per course. The junior high special education fee is $3 per class period.

On the senior high school level, those who participate in the rental plan will pay $3 for each half-credit course, $5 for each one-credit course, $10 for each two-credit course, and $15 for each three-credit course. The high school special education fee is also $3 per class period.

Students who are certified as indigent or foster children may be qualified to receive textbooks on a loan basis without charge. Those students or their parents are asked to inquire about the textbook fee waiver at their school office.

Immunizations and physicals

Virginia law requires students to show written proof of immunization against diphtheria, pertussis (whooping cough), tetanus, polio, rubella (measles), rubella (German measles), and mumps. If any student cannot show this written proof by the time school starts on August 27, that student will be denied entrance to school.

All elementary and kindergarten students entering a Virginia Beach school for the first time must also show proof of having received a complete physical examination. Under Virginia law, a child may not attend school until this requirement is met.

Physical exam forms and immunization forms are available at the office of each public school in Virginia Beach.

School physical examinations and immunizations are offered at Oceana, Boone, Sewells Point, and Portsmouth branch clinic facilities for new teachers and

Respite program needs caregivers

If you are a resident of Virginia Beach over the age of 18, with a genuine interest in working with the elderly, the City of Virginia Beach offers an opportunity to serve. Comprehensive Mental Health Services will sponsor a three week training course to be held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings beginning Tuesday, October 9.

Training is free of charge to qualified Virginia Beach adults. Upon completion, caregivers will be assigned to Virginia Beach families to aid them in caring for their elderly family member. Hours are flexible and the caregivers will be paid.

School hours

The public schools of Virginia Beach operate on a staggered opening and closing schedule, made necessary by varying school capacities, size of student bodies, and transportation requirements.

All of the senior high schools, as well as Virginia Beach, Princess Anne, and Great Neck junior highs, and Kemps Landing Intermediate, hold classes generally from 7:50 a.m. to 2 p.m. The other six junior highs are in session from approximately 7:40 a.m. to 3:50 p.m.

All other elementary schools operate for students between approximately 8:50 a.m. and 3 p.m. Because of special individual school problems, there may be slight variation in the opening and closing of some schools, but those variations are ten minutes or less in all cases.

The BIG Story

Special supplement to be published

Business, industry and growth will be our primary focus in this special edition, which salutes those responsible for the phenomenal growth Virginia Beach has experienced over the past two decades.

Virginia Beach: The Big Story will be published at the end of Summer as a special supplement to The Virginia Beach Sun, a weekly newspaper that has been serving the area for over 58 years.

"This special will help promote additional growth in Virginia Beach and serve as a promotional tool for the future," noted Hanes Byerly, publisher of the Virginia Beach Sun.

"Our news department is already hard at work preparing copy to make sure that articles and photographs reflect the progressive nature of all phases of commerce and government in this, the eleventh fastest growing city in the country.

"This special edition will be distributed to our many readers, visitors to our community, and to companies and individuals interested in locating here.

"Additional copies will be sent to the area's business and industrial leaders, to libraries, state legislators, members of Congress, and other influential people in the entire Tidewater area," Byerly noted.

"We sincerely hope that as many businessmen as possible will give serious consideration to the value of having their firms represented in 'The Virginia Beach Story,' both from the standpoint of a public relations story and as an advertiser.

"Many thousands will read with avid interest the contents of Virginia Beach: The Big Story," Byerly said.

All aspects of business and commerce will be explored, including home and commercial construction, real estate, retailers, wholesalers, agriculture, manufacturing and tourism.

Residency requirements for Beach schools

Federal regulations require that all Virginia Beach students be assigned to a school in the school attendance zone in which they live except under specific conditions. Requests for assignment to another school must be forwarded to and approved by the school system's Special Requests Review Board.

Existing law prohibits any child who is residing with a person other than his parent from enrolling in a Virginia Beach public school unless the person with whom the child is residing obtains legal custody of the child through the Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court; enrollment of such a student requires the approval of the school division's Pupil Personnel Services office. Information concerning this situation is available at any Virginia Beach school or the office of Pupil Personnel Services (427-4791).

Tuition will be charged for those students living with a legal guardian solely for the purpose of attending Virginia Beach Public Schools.

School records kept confidential

All student cumulative records are treated as confidential material, and the privacy rights of parents and students are safeguarded. Except as provided by law, outside agencies and individuals other than parents and eligible students are denied access to a student's records unless there is written consent from the parent(s) of a student under 18 years of age, or written consent from a student 18 years of age or older.

Parents of students under 18 years of age, and students 18 or older, may inspect and review their own children's, or their own records, respectively. They are also free to challenge information considered to be inaccurate, misleading, or otherwise in violation of the privacy or other rights of students.

Zoning continues to plague City Council

feared, that zoning categories are being created by deed restrictions. Although the Comprehensive Plan calls for areas to be developed at four units per acre, the city has no zoning category which permits four units per acre. To comply with the Plan, therefore, developers include deed restrictions with their applications. Deed restrictions, however, are not enforceable by the city, but are a matter between the buyers and sellers with the courts as the final recourse.

Henley said that if the Comprehensive Plan is going to call for four units per acre, the city would create a zoning category that calls for four units per acre. She also questioned the practice of including the gross acreages in computing the number of units, including roads and schools and "everything else" instead of only the developed property.

Madeline Upton Manchio, owner of the property, said that 300 acres of the property were lost to the Hampton Roads Sanitation District sewage treatment plant and nine acres more were taken for the connector between Old and New Dam Neck roads. She said the property is no longer useful as a farm and that she has a right to sell her property.

City Attorney Dale Bimson, in answer to a question from McClanahan, said that he had no problems with the agreement legally, but that from a practical viewpoint the applicant "should go farther than that" to restrict density.

L. Jones said that the city needed time to catch up before permitting more development.

R. Jones pointed out that a nearby tract was rezoned, restricting development to three units an acre. He said it was unfair to the previous applicant, who accepted the R-5 category, to grant a higher density for Upton Farm.

He maintained that the city has outgrown the Comprehensive Plan. He said Council has been waiting for months and months and months for the review of the Comprehensive Plan. It is expected to be ready by the end of the year.

Councilman John A. Baum said that the whole area is not fit to be agricultural anymore and that the city would not win in a court case if zoning were denied. "We have played the game to keep taxes low," he said.

A birth certificate or its equivalent is required at the time of the child's first public school admission. A student transferring into the Virginia Beach Public Schools from another system in Virginia must also have a transfer certificate or report card from the last school of attendance. Scholastic records from a previous school are desirable for all transfer students and are helpful in determining immediate placement; however, an official transcript, which will be requested from the previous school by the Virginia Beach school, is needed to complete the enrollment.

Retirement highrise is planned for bay

By Lee Cahill

City Council Reporter
The way has been cleared for the construction of a two-tower retirement community on Chesapeake Bay similar to Westminster-Canterbury, also on the Bay.

Virginia Beach City Council recently granted by a vote of 11-0 the necessary use permit for the two life care-age nursing and personal care centers on a 7.258 parcel on the beach front. The towers will be 165 feet high and contain a maximum of 435 units, from studio apartments to two or three bedroom apartments priced at $75,000 to $200,000.

The applicant is Bay Front Associates, Ltd., of Virginia Beach. National Lifecare Corporation, the developer, is one of the Barkan Companies of 1330 Boylston Street, Chestnut Hill, Mass. which, according to a release prepared by the company, has been involved in housing for the elderly for over 20 years and has developed, built and now manages projects in Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Georgia.

Thomas Broyles, attorney for Bay Front, said that the developer is "leaning toward condominium" marketing of the project which also will carry a $700 a month per person maintenance charge with less for the second person in a unit.

The fee will include the main meal each day, weekly house-keeping, and other services and amenities including 24-hour security and emergency medical coverage.

At Westminster-Canterbury, developed by the Presbyterian and Episcopal churches, residents purchased their units, but ownership reverts to the church association on the death of the residents.

Broyles said that Westminster-Canterbury has approximately 270 persons on its waiting list, seventy-seven percent of the units are occupied by one person and the high-rise contains 380 units starting at 344 square-foot studio units. He said the Bay Front units will start at 440 square feet and extend to 1225 square feet. The company he said, plans to construct one tower before determining the need for the second, with groundbreaking scheduled for the fall of 1985.

The minimum age of residents will be 62.

Councilwoman Barbara Henley said her concern was having elderly persons in a 17-story structure. "What happens if a power outage puts the elevator out of order?" she asked.

Broyles said that the building would have an emergency power system.

According to Robert D. Chellis, president of National Lifecare, plans call for a heated pool, tennis court, enclosed parking for each unit, a meals program and laundry plus house-keeping services as well as a branch bank, beauty parlor, barber shop, convenience store, soda fountain, health club, library, rooms for cards, billiards, arts and crafts and meeting hall.

Architects for the project are Williams, Tazewell and Cooke of Norfolk. Marketing the project, which will begin later this year, will be by Hamlyn Associates of Philadelphia.

The complex, when completed will contain approximately 57 units per acre compared to approximately 22 an acre at Westminster-Canterbury. City ordinances permit 70 units per acre for construction for the elderly.

Flea Market

The Virginia Beach Recreation Center/Kempsville will be conducting a "Flea Market" on Saturday, August 25, in Room 117. It will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The fee is $5 per table for sellers and a valid Facility Use Card is required. Admission is free for buyers. For additional information, Beach people should call Adult Services at 495-1892.

Baum

"There is a general mistrust of politicians and local government is the most accessible for the public."

And it is the civic leagues who do much of the accessing in Baum's eyes. To him, they represent a problem. "Civic leagues are totally ineffective," he concluded.

Card program designed to help police to kid rapport

Editor

Beginning this Saturday, September 1, Sun readers may see an unusual number of Beach youngsters approaching police officers and vehicles. No, it won't be a mass of unapprehended lawbreakers throwing themselves on the mercy of the law, but only a group of football card-collecting kids who just might learn something about police officers that they didn't know before.

"Programs like this are hopefully changing the image the media projects of the stereotypical police officer," explained Master Police Officer Robert C. Poyner, III, during a recent interview.

The Redskin Football Card Program of which Officer Poyner spoke is in its third year of operation, although new to Virginia Beach.

"To obtain the cards, youngsters must approach a uniformed officer, or a squad car, and simply ask for a card. There will be 16 different cards issued," Poyner said, "starting this weekend with John Riggins."

The idea of course, is to get the children to know the officers who patrol their city.

"One thing we in law enforcement have seen over the past few years is that crime prevention can be very effective when working with the young," Poyner said. "We want to teach the youth a positive response to the problems they all face. The football card program is designed to establish a rapport between the children and the officers, and vice versa."

"But we want to make it clear that children should not chase a police car on their bicycles to get cards, nor should they flag down a car for cards. This program was so successful last year in Northern Virginia that a black market in card trading began. For that reason we've set ground rules."

"We are asking that kids between the ages of four and eighteen approach officers for the cards. We have instructed uniformed patrolmen to issue one card per person, per week. If kids miss a card or two there will be a chance sometime in January to complete the collection," Poyner explained.

"Most importantly, do not interrupt an officer's duty to ask for a card," the officer said. "And we don't want kids going into the station house. Wait until the officer is free to talk, then ask for the card."

"Many kids just think we're here to put them in jail," Poyner concluded. "There's far more to the job than that."

Court docent workshop

The Virginia Beach Court Docent Program will hold a workshop Thursday, September 6, from 10 a.m. until 12 noon, in the school Board Room, School Administration Building, Virginia Beach.

Most of the docents (training guides) are wives of lawyers or former school teachers. However, these qualifications are not required, and the program is not restricted to women. However, one must attend training sessions and work with experienced docents before becoming a docent.

Sun readers who are interested in learning about this program, which introduces students to the judicial process as they tour the courts, may attend this workshop by telephoning Betty Dickerson, 481-0153.

School buses carry thousands each day

Virginia Beach Public Schools provides free bus transportation to the estimated 45,000 students who live beyond the designated "walking zones" of all public schools in the city.

More than 1,000 school bus routes link the neighborhoods of the city with public schools. Each route is carefully planned by the bus driver, principals of the individual schools, and the school division transportation department, to make sure the students are safely delivered to and from school in the shortest possible time. Except for rural areas, most school bus pick-up and delivery routes take less than 30 minutes. Most of the approximately 380 yellow school buses serve more than one school; with the staggered opening times of senior high (8 a.m.), elementary (9 a.m.), and junior highs (10 a.m.), one school bus can be used for three different schools both in the morning and in the afternoon.

This reduces traffic congestion on Virginia Beach roads and makes maximum use of the school buses.

The school division transportation department relies on a well-trained crew of drivers, including substitutes, who log nearly 16,000 miles each school day. Each person selected as a school bus driver receives extensive training in the classroom and behind-the-wheel and has successfully passed local and state written and driving tests. The drivers also learn bus discipline and road courtesy.

The average Virginia Beach school bus driver has about nine years experience behind a "big yellow" wheel, and many have more than 20 years service to the public schools. According to records of the State Department of Education, Virginia Beach Public Schools bus drivers have one of the best safety records in

Bond referendum is set for early next year

By Lee Cahill

City Council Reporter

Virginia Beach's $73 million bond referendum has been postponed to the first quarter of 1985.

Following a close (6-5) vote and references to "polarization," Councilman Robert G. Jones took exception to the polarization tag, saying that he was only going along with the game plan.

Jones said he left the special meeting on the bond referendum on August 15 with the understanding that Council had reached a consensus that the bond referendum would be held on November 6, the date of the general election. "Then I came in Monday (Aug. 20) and was rather shocked to find six members had changed their minds. I don't know who pulled the strings, but I was just going along with the game plan."

He added that if there is any polarization, "I don't want to be accused of it." Jones said that he was concerned about people second-guessing his motives. He said he is not pro or anti development, just trying to do what's best for the people. He said that reports that "the roads are inundated" concerned him.

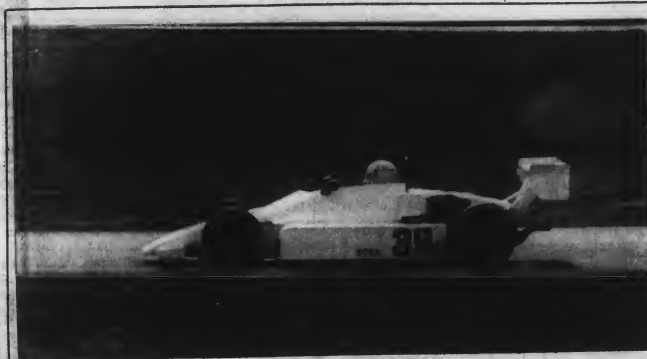

Councilwoman Nancy Creech, who voted with the majority, pointed out that she did not attend the Aug. 15 meeting.

Before Council decided to delay the referendum, which was requested by the School Board, Jones had attempted to win approval for a Nov. 6 referendum for roads and water and sewer, because there is no confusion in these areas. The School Board, however, wanted additional time to prepare material to inform the public and also to reassess its school needs. The projects which would be requested in the Nov. 6 referendum include a senior high school and new special education facilities for the school's $22.8 million share of the referendum.

Jones' motion to proceed with the roads, water and sewer bonds failed by a 5-6 vote. Voting in the minority were Jones, L. Jones, vice mayor Reba McClanahan, Meyera Oberndorf, and Barbara Henley. Voting with the majority were Mayor Harold Heischob, John A. Baum, Robert Pentress, Dr. J. Henry McCoy, Nancy

Cancer study examines lifestyles

By Catherine Moore

VIRGINIA BEACH—During the first two weeks of September, a volunteer group of Virginia Beach residents will call on families to complete the first phase of follow-up work to Cancer Prevention Study II, a large-scale, long-term research project of the American Cancer Society.

The study, the largest of its kind ever undertaken, is examining the lifestyles of more than 1.2 million Americans to learn about possible relationships of cancer to such personal and environmental factors as nutrition, medication, occupational exposures, pollution, low-level radiation, low tar and nicotine cigarettes, and passive smoking.

"Though the scientists are not able to report on definitive findings about cancer development and prevention this early in the study," said Mary Ellen Cox, chairman of the Virginia Beach Unit, "data from this first follow-up will allow them to make preliminary analyses about potential cancer risk factors in our lifestyles and environment."

Information obtained in this follow-up and subsequent ones will be added to baseline data that already has been collected and computerized, and will enable researchers to begin the process of data analysis. Two other follow-ups are scheduled for September 1986 and 1988.

Nimmo Church area getting 7-Eleven

A site near the historic Nimmo Church on Oceana Boulevard will permit the construction of a 7-Eleven store.

By a vote of 8-3 recently, Virginia Beach City Council rezoned the property, 1.29 acres, from R-3 Residential District to B-2 Community-Business District. The parcel is located along the north side of Princess Anne Road, west of Oceana Boulevard.

Jack Haworth, attorney for the applicants, Ronald L. and Holly Hall, pointed out that with the realignment of Oceana Boulevard to continue General Booth Boulevard, the parcel will be surrounded by roads on three sides and not suitable for development for the two single-family dwellings that would be permitted with the present zoning.

Voting against the application were Councilwomen Barbara Henley and Meyera Oberndorf and Councilman Robert G. Jones.

The Planning commission recommended denial because the application was considered premature.

Conditions of the rezoning include a 25-foot buffer on the southside along Princess Anne Road and submission of plans for the proposed 7-Eleven to the Historical/Architectural Review Board. The area around the Nimmo Church has a Historical/Cultural overlay classification. Haworth said, however, that the Hall property is 600 feet away from the church.

Sheridan Barber, president of the Red Mill Farms Civic League, opposed the application. Of the proposal to use architecture that would not conflict with "a 7-Eleven site," he said, that "a 7-Eleven is a 7-Eleven. They all look the same." He added, "Virginia Beach prides itself on its rich heritage. To allow the dignity of the Nimmo Church to be violated is a grave error."

Haworth maintained that the area was changed, not by the 7-Eleven, but because the city decided to run a 110-foot right-of-way by the property.

No growth... no nonsense

After his first couple of months in office Mayor Harold Heischouer has finally come out in favor of holding the line when it comes to the no-growth boundary established by the City's Comprehensive plan. Recent interviews with The Virginian-Pilot and the Sun have shown the new mayor has a reluctance to open up more territory to development.

Anyone using the roads in our city will realize Virginia Beach has major problems moving her citizens and visitors over her clogged arteries with both their safety and sense of humor intact.

The water problem is not so visible, but certainly as important to the quality of life hopefully obtainable by John and Jane Doe, citizens of Virginia Beach. People want the best when they move to the Beach.

Currently they get their fair share of squabbles between businessmen, developers, civic leaders and the very politicians who are drawn from those ranks.

The recent flap between one of the city's leading developers and the Planning Commission, calling for resignations and apologies, is a case in point. For too long the verbal combat has reigned supreme. Tempers must flair when money, power and the future are mixed. Let us hope that our new mayor can provide the fusion he has promised for Council, with thought that a Council combined can survive longer than a council at arms, a not too distant memory.

Our new mayor and our new Council deserve some time to work out their balance. Citizens should make their views clear to their representative, then sit back and remark on the combined performance of their Council. As the mayor has often said, one councilman's vote is as important as the next. No one person can do it alone! Only time will tell what this particular mix of personalities will do. Give them support before judgement. —S.M.

Beach beauty

Area photographers will be interested to know that less than three weeks remain to submit photographs in the first vacation photography contest sponsored by Eastman Kodak Company and the state of Virginia. A $1,000 grand prize, as well as a variety of Kodak disc and instant camera outfits, make up the 23 prizes that will be awarded to winning photographers.

The contest is intended to stimulate illustrations for a new state theme, "Virginia. Exciting Times Every Time." Virginia has always been famous for its scenic beauty, and Virginia Beach especially so. It is expected that among the large number of professional and amateur photographers in the area, a breathtaking shot of the beach will be among the winning photos. —B.T.

The real school test

In its study of "education renewal" in the United States, the Task Force on Education for Economic Growth attempted to measure the progress the states are making to improve public schools.

Among the things the task force examined were spending increases, initiatives to encourage better teaching, curriculum changes and firmer student discipline rules.

Forty-six states are working on comprehensive plans to improve their public schools. Twenty of the programs are less than a year old.

Such measures as improving the quality of teachers, lengthening the school day or year, more homework and reducing the size of classes should have positive effects.

But such measures are just a means to an end: better education. The effects will have to be measured over a number of years.

Delaware Gov. Pierre S. DuPont, chairman of the task force, warned at the National Governors' Conference in Nashville that if states pull back on programs, "we'll quickly find ourselves falling behind again."

True enough. It is encouraging to see activity related to school improvement efforts in so many states. But the real test is whether that activity results in a better education for the nation's youngsters.

Letters To The Editor

Criminal or not?

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

Did the elected officials of Virginia Beach vote to make it a criminal offense for an unsuspecting tourist to sit on a rock at Rudee Inlet? Two "Danger-No Fishing/Crabbng" signs, one east of the Lighthouse Restaurant and the other on the jetty, are vaguely worded and 325 feet apart. Neither is at the obvious beach pathway.

On Memorial Day weekend, after subs/coles at Zero's, a friend and I walked approximately two miles south along the beach to view the surfing. We sat less than 10 minutes upon a rock three feet above the sand, 30 feet west of the surf, 100 feet from the ocean side sign, and 225 feet from the Lighthouse Restaurant sign. We and some other tourists were arrested without warning by Officer P. J. Bender.

A sergeant at the 18th/Baltic precinct encouraged pleading innocent to this frivolous charge and suggested it would be dismissed. Since it was repugnant that my first and only offense (including "traffic") would be trespassing, this school teacher went to Criminal Court on August 9. After listening three hours to the irrelevant ramblings of those charged with assaulting police officers, and drunks carrying concealed weapons, my case was heard. Judge Preston didn't wish to consider my photos or the facts/figures concerning the wording, distances, or placement of the two signs. That Officer Bender had warned others to get off those same rocks, while writing our summons, also had no bearing. Judge Preston's only concern was enforcing this ordinance. I was found guilty and fined.

Out of the $30 collected from criminals like myself, Virginia Beach should net $10 for their coffers. This money might be used toward: A. Explicit signs - "No Trespassing on Rocks." B. 10 feet Barbed Wire Fence. C. In-Service Program for the Jetty Patrol.

If Bender and others are over-zealous in executing their duties, then they'd benefit from Webster's definition of jetty. They might be taught to discriminate between polite, law-abiding tourists who pause to watch the surfing and those who venture out onto the undeniably dangerous jetty to fish etc.

If this ordinance is meant to trap tourists, then commendations are in order. (Officer Bender has undoubtedly generated much needed revenue...) In the future, my tourist dollars (and those of anyone I might influence) will be spent at Nags Head, Ocean City, or Norfolk beaches!!! Karen I. Moore, Luray, Virginia

Jennings called to task

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

I refer to an article which appeared in the Virginian-Pilot newspaper on August 17, 1984 in which Virginia Beach City Councilman H. Jack Jennings, Jr. acknowledges that he has used City staff, City facilities, City stationery and apparently City postage for his own personal gain.

The State code under the Criminal section 18.2 (111-112) and under Virginia Supreme Court Case Law clearly state a violation of anyone holding public office and using facilities, stationery, etc.

This obvious abuse of a political position and city funds for a personal, political gain is appalling.

I would appreciate the Commonwealth's Attorney's office of Virginia Beach investigating this matter to determine whether or not this newspaper article is accurate and under Provision section 18.2 (111-112) is appropriate.

Gimme shelter

A few weeks back our lead story was a treatment of Hurricane possibilities for our city this season. For a day I was placed in the nostalgic coziness of treating events of twenty years ago and more that I had lived through as a young man coming of age in a city just being born. Here I was two decades later writing about Hurricane Donna and the Ash Wednesday storm, using old yellowed copies of The Virginian-Pilot and The Virginia Beach Sun for research and background, when in my mind's eye I remember our 16 foot boat rising with the swelling Lake Joyce until my father went out to tie her to a tree right outside our kitchen window, a spot some thirty feet from the usual waterline.

I remember still that Shore Drive was under water from Nock's Store to the old, narrow Lesner Bridge and that one of my uncles living in Sandbridge had his fall-out shelter washed away by a non-nuclear, but none-the-less impressive Atlantic Ocean.

After the storms you could go out and shout to the foreign seamen who were stranded in their beached tankers. There was one tanker that had washed up so close you could stand on the dry sand of Chesapeake Beach and lean on the hull of the ship without getting your feet wet.

Ed's notes

By Samuel
Martinette, Jr.

I remembered those storms all right. But I was younger then and possessed of the knowledge that I couldn't be hurt. I had too much to do.

Having aged a couple of decades and having been hurt a time or two, I now found myself in the role of town crier (early journalists) spinning a warning to the newer citizens of my old home town, that yes, we could suffer from a storm. Better to be forewarned.

At any rate there we were in the midst of production, my story typeset, the charts the state had made for us sized and shot and the production chief Sue Fuller spilling out the copy like a ticker tape parade, until we got to one of the emergency shelters on the list.

Fuller pointed out to me that one of the street names for an emergency shelter located in a high school looked like it was spelled wrong. Surely Shorehaven should be Shore Haven. No help from the phone book. Two phone calls to offices that could clear things up didn't help. Both lines were busy. Emergency shelter addresses call for emergency measures. I called the school.

"I'm sorry," the receptionist said. "I'm not at liberty to divulge that kind of information over the phone."

I explained what I was doing, newspapers, Hurricane safety and all that, but no, it simply couldn't be done.

"You'll have to call the school board office for that!" my new friend said. That line also proved to be busy.

My over active writer's imagination conjured up grotesque and twisted piles of drowned citizens, their lives washed away by the lack of an address, future hopes dashed on the rocky indifference of a bored pbx operator. Deadline approached.

"Let them eat seaweed!" I declared. "The paper must come out!"

And there, for posterity is the reason that so many future drowning victims may be found clutching city maps in their water-logged little hands. God knows we tried.

22nd annual

Huge turnout marks successful surf tourney

By Barbara Ann Turner
Staff Writer

Some 40,000 people turned out to watch the 22nd annual East Coast Surfing Championships at Camp Pendleton Beach on Saturday and Sunday. It was standing room only as crowds cheered local Virginia Beach surfers on to victory in nearly all of the amateur divisions. The contest drew a record number of participants this year with 279 competing in the amateur ranks and 24 professionals trying for the $1,500 first prize.

Sean Brickell, coordinator of publicity for the Jaycee sponsored competition, has been with the event for the past 21 years. "This may be the most perfect weather we have had for the contest. The waves are great, the surfers are aggressive, and both are really consistent." The contest is traditionally held this weekend because it is the beginning of hurricane season. Tropical swells result in cool breezy weather and excellent surfing conditions. Saturday, waves were breaking at three to five feet. Brickell explained, "The waves are very rideable, and every surfer is finding something to ride in every heat."

Space age technology has had its way with surfing as with most other sports. Since the Polynesians began carving 100 pound surf boards out of Koa trees two hundred years ago, surfers have sought to make boards lighter and more maneuverable. Modern boards of injected foam are covered with a clear, epoxy and weigh only six to eight pounds.

Drastic changes have also taken place in the length of boards. Ron Swan, of Island Water Sports, explained that the Longboard events in today's competitions are a concession to the surfers to the 60s who refuse to change their style.

Chris Bystrom, creator of the film Blazing Boards, explained that "surfing longboards is some how more soulful. You don't get the same speed as with the newer boards. They are designed to hydroplane and can reach incredible speeds. It takes a different kind of control and balance to ride the longboards, and some surfers just won't give that up." Both Bystrom and Swan remarked that surfing is only now coming into its second generation in terms of popularity on the east coast. Many of the surfers out on the water this weekend were well into their thirties. See SURF, page 8

The timeless art of Onofrio Pepe

The first time I saw the work of Onofrio Pepe, it was arranged in an organic cluster on the sitting room rug of Barbara and Andrew Fine of Virginia Beach, two of the Italian artist's most faithful patrons. The ceramic sculptures, most depicting the mythical, hooved faun, had just arrived from Florence, where the slight, non-English speaking Pepe had made them a permanent farewell.

It is a very difficult thing for an artist to release a work to the world, particularly an entire series representing a year's labor; even more so for a body of work that the artist considers to be autobiographical. Walter Bellini, a friend to Pepe as well as his gallery representative in Italy, pointed out those facts in the Fine's sitting room.

Bellini—cultured, articulate, handsome—is a practicing architect whose professed passion for art surpasses his role as a dealer, a title he dislikes. He sees his mission as a liaison, placing the work of devoted young artists like Pepe into the hands of appreciative patrons.

Bellini is making careful note of the purchasers of these sculptures from Pepe's "Il Fauno" series. These evocative, passionate works are one-of-a-kind, and "someday" Pepe may want to retrieve the originals to create editions in fine metals—most likely in bronze. Even in clay, the forms have the rich patina of certain metals, a sur-

A quartet of local ceramic sculptors were among the first to enter the galleries at the Arts Center on August 22, the day the sculptures and accompanying drawings were installed for public viewing. One artist, Betty Sturm, was struck by the sense of Country cooking good reading

When asked if I have a hobby, I usually will say "food." I love to eat good food and I love to discover quality restaurants and excellent cookbooks. This past spring a number of magazines mentioned that a new and very exciting restaurant had opened eight miles south of Chapel Hill, such traditional foods as wild strawberry preserves, Virginia Fried chicken with browned gravy, smothered rabbit, and deep dish apple pie, the book is not just a collection of recipes. It is also an essay, or rather, a reflection on the flavor and life style of pre-war, rural, Virginia.

Edna Lewis was raised in Freetown, an unincorporated village near Charlottesville. The first residents were all freed from chattel slavery and they built a community based on pride and cooperation. It is the spirit of Freetown which is at the center of Edna Lewis' book. It is the joy of good, simple, fresh food being enjoyed by family and friends, after a long day in the fields. It is the spirit of an Emancipation Day Dinner. It is the excitement of Christmas preparations. The Taste of Country Cooking is not a dewey-eyed look at the past. It is an excellent book which weaves reminiscences on time and place with recipes for remarkably good food.

North Carolina. The word was that the kitchen, under the direction of Edna Lewis, was producing some of the finest southern specialties anywhere. An early spring excursion to the Fearrington House restaurant proved the critics were right. The meal was magnificent.

Afterwards, while describing this wonderful culinary experience to a colleague, I happened to mention the name Edna Lewis. My friend gave an excited shout and ran off to the book shelves, returning in an instant, with a cookbook in hand. "This is one of my favorite books," she said. It was, of course, by Edna Lewis.

Complaints registered by a black civic organization have led to the discontinuance of a policy in connection with resume forms of applicants for boards and commissions in Virginia Beach.

The City Clerk's office had established a practice of requiring that the initials of the organization or individual that originally requested the resume forms be placed on the returned resume. City Clerk Ruth Smith said that the requirement was administered uniformly as a service and convenience. In this way, she said, her office could notify both the organization or individual (often a Council member) and the applicant that the resume had been received.

To Don Kilgore, president of the United Council of Citizens/Civic Leagues, a black organization, the initials were like a red flag signifying that the applicant is black.

Kilgore complained to City Council and Councilwoman Barbara Henley brought the matter up in Council meeting Monday afternoon.

Council was apparently unaware of any policy in that respect and Smith explained that she applied the requirement uniformly. She said for instance, that Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr. had requested resumes for the Lynnhaven Borough Advisory Council and these copies were initiated "LBAC." She said if a Council member requests a resume for an individual, the copy will be initiated with the Council member's name so that he or she can be notified when the resume is received.

She said that Kilgore had requested 100 resumes. At the time, she said, the office had only 39 on hand and gave him 37.

Smith said she was not aware at the time that the United Council of Citizens was a black organization.

But because of the protest, the office will discontinue the practice of requiring applicants to place on their resume the initials of the organization to which they belong—or any other initials.

Beach traffic engineer is a fast moving man

By Greg Glassner

A City of Virginia Beach traffic engineer during the week, Edd Davin spends weekends racing through traffic.

Davin is currently campaigning a highly modified racing car in the Sports Car Club of America's Formula C category at tracks such as Summit Point in West Virginia and Watkins Glen, N.Y. "I raced a lot from 1967 until '79, when I put it aside for some personal reasons," Davin noted. "Then last summer, I felt like getting back in a racing car again."

Davin called up Bill Scott, who operates a racing school and owns Summit Point Raceway and arranged for three days of testing.

"I wanted to find out if it was a foolish idea or if I still had it in me to win," he said. "After that three-day session Scott told me, "Go racing."

Davin spent the winter re-engineering his old Tui Super Vee into something capable of competing with state-of-the-art formula cars.

"I'm an engineer by education, so I did some sketching and changed the suspension on the car. Wings and side pods were also added to provide more downforce."

To get his SCCA national license back, he ran two regionals at Summit Point, winning both. An engine losing its oil pressure caused him to accept a fifth place finish in his first national, also at Summit Point earlier this month.

Davin hopes to run a national at Watkins Glen and may compete in the Mid-Atlantic Road Racing Series (MARRS) at Summit Point over the Labor Day

"With those two regional wins, I'm leading the MARRS point standings in my class, so I may decide to go after that title," he noted.

The lure of racing in Europe also figures in Davin's list of possibilities.

In 1968 he went to England to purchase a Brabham-Holby Formula III car. "When I arrived it was only half finished. So I stuck around to work on it and raced the European circuits for three months."

That venture took him to tracks such as Brands Hatch and Silverstone, in England, Spa and Zolder in Belgium and Germany's historic Nurburgring.

"Some of the guys I was racing with back then are forming a new team in England. If I can get the sponsorship, I could drive for them."

For the time being, however, Davin is operating on a shoe-string budget. Wife Gwen, also a Beach city employee, is crew chief and timer.

Next year the racing traffic engineer would like to try the Super Vee pro series or maybe sample international racing one more time.

The workshop provided complete orientation to the single-camera systems as applied to learning systems, with an in-depth study of subject area utilization.

Katrina Hastings attends Berklee

Boston, Mass. - Berklee College of Music recently accepted Katrina L. Hastings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hastings of 1109 Homestead Dr. in Virginia Beach, for entrance to its unique new Career Exploration Program, June 28 through August 17. Her curriculum will include Private Instruction, Ensemble Performance, Theory, Harmony, Arranging and Ear Training.

This special program is designed to assist high school students considering music as a vocation to identify individual musical and educational strengths, formulate career goals, and develop an approach for obtaining professional education to realize these goals.

Hastings will be exposed to Berklee's professional curriculum, which includes course offerings in Jazz Arranging, Improvisation, Recording Studio Techniques, Popular Vocal Arranging, Song Writing and Composing for Film and Other Media.

Santa comes early

City Council played Santa a little ahead of time at its meeting last week and decided to give all Virginia Beach city employees a holiday on Christmas Eve. (Usually employees get a half day off.)

That was after it gave itself the day off when Councilman Robert Fentress noted that "nobody was going to be here anyway."

Council got its holiday because Christmas Eve falls on Monday, regular Council day.

Council also cancelled its October 1 Council meeting to allow Council members to attend meetings of the Virginia Municipal League. Most of the members, Mayor Harold Heischberger said, plan to attend sessions on Monday or Tuesday (October 1 and 2), or on both days. The meeting starts September 30.

screen to cover the hole, then stick it on with airplane glue. It helps to weave the edge of the patch onto the screen before applying the glue.

Wooden Disks, Repairing - Never use soap. Clean them with fine sand, applied with a damp cloth moistened with white vinegar. Rub in a circular motion, then rinse well and, if possible, let dry in the open air.

Wooden Floors, Cleaning - Never use plain water. The best thing to use is kerosene. Go over the floor with a soft cloth dampened with kerosene, then polish with a second cloth. Note: A good polisher is a large piece of soft cloth, soaked in kerosene, then dried in the sun. It gives a marvelous polish.

Wooden Floors, Losing Their Color - Make tea to match the color of your floor, for instance, very dark, medium, or lightly stained. When tea is cold, apply it to the faded area with a soft white cloth. When dry, wax or polish in the usual way. Note: Cold tea is also very good as a cleaner.

Wooden Floors, Squeaking - A generous amount of liquid wax poured into the cracks usually does the job. Talcum powder or powdered graphite often stops the squeaks.

Wooden Spoons And Cutting Boards, Rough - Smooth them by rubbing with fine sandpaper with the grain. When smooth, wash and rinse in cold water.

Drummond

Drummond named information coordinator for Healthamerica

VIRGINIA BEACH - HealthAmerica, the nation's largest independent investor-owned operator of health maintenance organizations (HMOs) has named Mark W. Drummond as management information systems (MIS) coordinator for Hampton Roads operations. The announcement was made recently by David Mulligan, executive director of HealthAmerica's Hampton Roads operations.

As MIS coordinator, Drummond will be responsible for data relevant to marketing, statistics, finance and day-to-day operations.

Drummond is a recent graduate of Old Dominion University with a B.S. degree in business administration and a concentration in management information systems. He is a member of the Data Processing Management Association.

VHDA announces new solar program

RICHMOND - Prospective homebuyers considering purchasing or building a new solar home may be eligible to be given a grant of up to $5,000 under a joint program of the Virginia Housing Development Authority (VHDA) and the Virginia Division of Energy.

The grant would be used to reduce the principal amount of the mortgage loan. This would give homeowners more equity in the home and reduce their monthly mortgage payments.

Grant funds are available for passive and active solar space heating, natural cooling measures and solar domestic hot water systems. Designs which result in greater energy savings would receive the larger grants up to the $5,000 maximum.

To qualify, prospective solar homebuyers must have an adjusted gross income of $29,400 or less and the house must have a sales price of $61,100 or less with the following exceptions:

For the cities of Virginia Beach, Portsmouth, Norfolk, Suffolk, Chesapeake, Poquoson, Williamsburg, Newport News, Hampton, and the counties of Gloucester, James City and York, the income limit is $34,300 and the maximum sales price is $73,100.

Interested persons should call VHDA in Richmond at (804) 782-1986 and ask for Solar Grant information.

"We can be fairly optimistic about housing this year, although we would not be surprised to see a drop-off in activity this fall," association president Pete Herder said.

"But over the longer term, high interest rates are devastating to the American home buyer.

State realtor convention set for Virginia Beach will emphasize improving professional skills

More than 1,000 real estate professionals from across Virginia will converge on Virginia Beach during the last week of September, to attend the 64th Annual Convention of the Virginia Association of Realtors. Major Convention emphasis will be on sessions designed to improve member professionalism and to those who buy and sell real property.

"The real estate market today is experiencing more rapid change than at any other time in this century," said Dorcas Helfant, of Virginia Beach, president of the 20,000-member State Association. "To meet this change, the Realtor organization, at all levels, is determined that our members be prepared to offer consumers the most knowledgeable and best supported service available anywhere.

"In order to meet the needs of both today's prospective homebuyers and the real estate professionals who serve them, the major thrust of this four-day meeting," said Helfant, "will be 'How can Realtors better serve the home-buying public during these times of rapid change?'"

"This year's theme, 'Waves of Change,' indicates the perspective of this year's convention program," said Helfant. "We've scheduled 50 hours of educational sessions for our members. We expect these sessions to attract hundreds who want to be fully informed about the latest developments in our business.

"Realtors today are immensely more prepared to assist buyers and sellers of real property than they were five years ago," said Helfant. "The changes which have taken place have demanded that men and women in the real estate business become better educated and more professional - or find other means of employment.

Area banks receive distinguished service award

NORFOLK - Sovran Bank and Atlantic National Bank have received Distinguished Service Awards from the National Association of Real Estate Brokers (NAREB). NAREB is a trade organization that consists of approximately 4,000 primarily minority real estate professionals across the country.

A $100 million master commitment administered nationwide by Sovran Mortgage Corporation, a subsidiary of Sovran Bank, for NAREB, was first announced in December, 1983. Sovran Mortgage Corporation approves all loan requests, according to Fannie Mae guidelines, sells the approved package to Fannie Mae, then retains the final servicing of the portfolio. This is a joint agreement between NAREB, Atlantic National Bank and Sovran Bank, marking the first time a minority trade association, a minority bank and a majority bank have provided loans through a specific constituency. Loans available for servicing are one-year adjustable rate mortgages tied to the one-year Treasury Index.

According to Doyle E. Hull, senior executive vice president, Sovran Bank, "Loans are made available to members of NAREB through their local boards. This increases the realtors' individual sales and encourages new membership in the organization." Charles M. Reynolds, president of Atlantic National Bank commented, "The funds made available by Fannie Mae through NAREB is a significant first. It allows a realist to know at the time of sale that he or she has a funding source for a client."

The $100 million commitment earmarks the first time in Fannie Mae's 45-year history that it has funneled mortgage money through a real estate sales trade group, rather than dealing directly with lenders.

Long promoted

Chester B. Long, Jr. was elected senior vice president of Central Fidelity Bank's Eastern Region at a recent meeting of the Board of Directors.

Long recently assumed duties as bank group loan manager for Virginia Beach after 13 years with United Virginia Bank where he began as a management trainee and has most recently served as Staunton Commercial Division head and senior vice president. He holds a Bachelor's Degree from Old Dominion University.

Summer visitors

Among the many summer visitors who are attracted to Virginia Beach are Rotarians. While enjoying their vacations at the Beach, they make up their Rotary meetings at the Virginia Beach Rotary Club. The visiting Rotarians come to the Beach from all over the world and from all parts of the United States. Rotarians try to maintain 100 per cent attendance. They can keep their perfect attendance records by making up missed meetings at other clubs around the world. B. M. Stanton and William G. Thompson, Jr. of the Virginia Beach Rotary Club have 100 per cent attendance for 34 and 32 years respectively. Two visitors to the Beach this summer are Ed and Antonietta Soave. Colonial times

Hot grub cools hot bodies

Eating hot peppers in a 'hot climate may not seem to be an effective means of cooling off, but that's what early English settlers did in the New World when confronted with heat and humidity, the likes of which they had never known in their native country.

This finding, along with many other surprising revelations about the medical and psychological effects of hot weather on early colonists, is contained in a work recently featured in a recent edition of the William and Mary Quarterly published by the College's Institute of Early American History and Culture.

The article, entitled "Fear of Hot Climates in the Anglo-American Colonial Experience," by historian Karen Ordahl Kupperman, delves into the hardships endured by colonists who charted new territory in the 16th and 17th centuries in the West Indies, Newfoundland, New England, and the earliest settlements in Maryland and the Carolinas. Kupperman is on the history faculty at the University of Connecticut.

"The general agreement that English people would be healthiest in the temperate climates was frequently offered as a reason to concentrate colonization efforts on New England and Newfoundland," writes Kupperman. "From the 1630s on, propagandists for southern colonies began to stress that the places they promoted lay between the extremes of northern cold and the southern heat, and therefore had the riches of the hot areas without their evils."

"The sun and heat figured prominently in early English thinking about colonization, and in a profoundly ambivalent way," says Kupperman. "Fear of hot climates was balanced by the belief that the sun was a source of riches." She adds, "Early Virginia pamphlets promised that the colony would produce oranges, lemons, sugar cane, rice, almonds and anise, all of which grew in areas where 'the sunne is so neerer a neighbor.'"

There was widespread belief that English people who were used to the cooler temperatures would sicken and die in hot climates. Sweating was one bodily function that the early scientists recognized as beneficial to conduct heat from the interior of the body to the outside, says Kupperman. "But they worried about the result of the process because they believed that great sweating left the inner parts, particularly the stomach, cold and debilitated."

The colonists attributed loss of appetite in these hot climates to a weakness of the stomach: "How can you expect to find heat, or warmth in you stomach, to digest that meat, when the sunne has exhausted your heat and spirits so, to your outer parts, as you are chill'd and numb'd within?" As a remedy, they drank "strong spirits" and ate hot peppers to warm their insides.

"To some extent," writes the author, "the taking of chili peppers and alcohol in small amounts was a good adaptive strategy, but not for the reasons the colonists and their medical advisers thought." Today we know that hot peppers promote the flow of blood toward the skin, resulting in perspiration.

"Early modern science taught that human beings and their native physical environment normally existed in a state of ecological harmony. It followed that men and women who had been bred in England were unsuited to environments that were radically different, such as those of the southern region of the New World, with their heats and damp and different dietary regimen," writes Kupperman.

Consequently, those who ventured to such places, stayed there, and ate the indigenous foods, risked sickness in the short run and drastic changes in physiology and psychology in the long run, as their bodies responded to the new environment," she says.

Kupperman also writes that other materials were vulnerable to the hot, humid environment. "Hangings in the planters' houses were spoiled by ants, and eaten by cockroaches and rats." The colonists also had to contend with a variety of insects, lizards, land crabs, and "such that inhabited the house, of which chiggers were the worst. No indoor place was safe from the ingenuity of ants, and snakes could climb walls six feet high."

But the fear of hot climates in America had been contained by the 18th century, according to Kupperman. "Southern colonists accepted the danger and discomfort, much as some 20th-century Americans accept the risk of cigarette smoking," she says.

"Within their commitments to the southern colonies the residents had learned that they could do much to make themselves more comfortable, and even safer." Although statesmen like Alexander Hamilton "thought Maryland as inherently unhealthy, he gave up the idea of returning to Britain in the 1740s despite his continued bad health," adds Kupperman. "He wrote of the summer's sickness with resignation and acceptance."

"Others believed that nothing short of their return to England could cure them. With the ill of hot weather to plague them, 'We cannot know how many colonists lived for the day when they could return to their own native climate,' Kupperman concludes.

Bond issue

Crech, and H. Jack Jennings Jr. The voting was reversed in the deferral vote.

Chances are that the referendum will be held after January. Henley pointed out that the city would lose the opportunity to promote the bonds during December because of the Christmas holidays. She said that the schools will have no difficulty because they have a captive audience. Roads and water and sewer are different, she said. The city depends on presentations to civic organizations.

"We have to discount December, and January is not a whole lot better," Henley said. "When we look at November, we can expect 80 percent of the voters. I don't know whether a big turnout is favorable or not, but if we're sampling (public opinion) that's what we want." She said that in January the turnout would be small and the special election would cost the taxpayers $30,000.

When the 1985 referendum was approved, no specific date was included, only the first quarter of the year.

Sheridan Barber, president of the Red Mill Farms Civic League, said that this group would favor the referendum only if it included an elementary school for the Courthouse-Sandbridge area. He noted that the Capital Improvement Budget released in 1982 listed the school number four in priorities among 45. He wondered why it was removed from high priority in subsequent CIB's.

Rae LeSesen said he did not understand the Council's vacillation. He said talk about fearing there's not enough time to educate the voters sounds like a sales company for a new model automobile. "Why a special election in the winter is any better than one in the summer I can't understand," LeSesen said. "It seems that the city doesn't want a big turnout...How can we understand they'll be better educated in January?" With every delay, he said, the need becomes greater. He said that further delays indicate the city lacks leadership and needs long-range planning.

The referendum will include $36,720,000 for highways and $14.5 million for water and sewer projects as well as the $22,150 for schools.

"I still think we're not ready," said McCoy, but added that he is not against the Red Mill school. He said that he would prefer to have a recommendation from Superintendent of Schools E. E. Brickell. He expressed reluctance in getting into a non-cooperative position with the School Board although he said he agreed "they should dictate the date of the referendum." He said that if the referendum were held on Nov. 6, a lot of people would not think about the referendum until they see it on the ballot.

Baum said he was concerned about polarization--the "so-called business groups versus the neighborhood civic leagues." He where there apparently was a that one builder gets copious publicity. "He'd be better off not to show up soon." He said that Council had to recognize what is in the Comprehensive Plan guidelines.

High corn!

Carol and Billy Shirley display one of the products that helped make them "Young Farmers of the Year."

Top farmers named

Billy and Carol Shirley of Chesapeake have been named Southeastern District Young Farmers of the Year by the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation.

The Shirleys, both 30, operate a 456 acre farm, raising corn, wheat and soybeans. Billy Shirley holds a degree in business administration and journalism and has been farming nine years. They have both been very active with Young Farmer activities of the Virginia Beach Farm Bureau and in church activities. They have two children, ages 2 and 4.

The Shirleys will now compete with five other District Young Farmer winners on the state level at the annual Virginia Farm Bureau meeting in Norfolk in November. The State Young Farmer of the Year will receive a Commodore 64 personal computer courtesy of the Virginia Farm Credit Association and compete for national honors at the American Farm Bureau Annual Meeting in Honolulu, Hawaii in January 1985.

Housing revenue bonds recommended

Housing Revenue bonds totaling $24 million have been recommended for issuance for the construction of two Virginia Beach housing projects containing 624 units.

Virginia Beach City Council recently, by a vote of 11-0, recommended the issuance of the bonds by redevelopment and housing authorities in Newport News and Portsmouth. Virginia Beach does not have a redevelopment and housing authority.

Barrett-Runge Corporation is applying for $19 million in bonds through the Newport News Authority for a 504 unit multi-family residential rental project on Indian River Road near its intersection with Ferrell Parkway.

Newtown Diamond Associates has requested $5 million for the construction of a 120-unit multi-family residential rental project at the intersection of Newtown Road and Shurley Lane.

At least 20 percent of the housing units will be reserved for persons of low or moderate income required by Federal law to qualify for the housing bonds.

How To Tame The Bear.

Bears can be dangerous. Even the Wall Street bear can take a bite out of your financial future. But don't worry. Buying U.S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan will let you ignore any bear market. Bonds have a variable interest rate combined with a guaranteed minimum of 7.5%, if you hold them 5 years or more.

So you share in higher returns with the bull, but can't lose to the bear. That's the best of both markets.

Take stock in America.

Four weeks to go

Major changes announced to Neptune Festival schedule

VIRGINIA BEACH--Fat Ammons, the Catalinas and the Showmen will highlight a four hour beach music extravaganza at the Virginia Beach Dome to put a fitting party-like cap on the first day of the Eleventh Annual Neptune Festival, September 26.

From 7 until 11 p.m. beach music from years past will rock through the Dome with the help of disc jockeys Tom Looney and Jim Lawrence of WTAR Radio, which is sponsoring the event along with Parkway Pontiac Volvo, and Herman Joseph Beer, a product of the Coors Co.

"Come dressed for the beach and for dancing," said Cindy Butler of WTAR's programming and promotions department.

The Neptune Festival Beach Party has been put together to help United Cerebral Palsy and proceeds will benefit efforts to combat the crippling disease. Tickets will be available in advance through Ticketron for $5. On the night of the performance tickets will be sold at the door for $7.

The Neptune Festival WVEC Grand Parade, scheduled for the following Saturday, is also being moved from its original starting time of 3 p.m. up to 1:30 p.m.

"This is to accommodate Channel 13, which wants to do live coverage of the parade," said Kathleen McIntyre, Neptune Festival Director.

The Grand Parade will move along Atlantic Avenue between 10th and 25th Streets. It will feature a host of local marching bands, show bands, floats, clowns, King Neptune and his Court and the Krewe of Caesar, one of the traditional Mardi Gras parade units making its first parade performance outside its home city of New Orleans.

"The change in parade time meant we also had to move back the King Neptune Luncheon," added McIntyre. "It's now scheduled for Sunday, September 30 instead of Saturday, September 29." The luncheon will be from noon to 2 p.m. at the Black Angus Restaurant. Tickets are $12, obtainable at the Neptune Festival Headquarters by calling 490-1221.

The Neptune Festival Presentation and Ball, originally listed as starting at 8 p.m. on Saturday, September 22 at the Cavalier-on-the-Hill Hotel will now begin at 7:30 p.m. The evening's events will feature Al Hirt and a variety of musical talent along with a water ballet.

Al Hirt's beachfront concerts have now officially been scheduled for 4 p.m. on Saturday, September 29 and 5 p.m. on Sunday, September 30. Both concerts will be held at 25th Street between Atlantic Avenue and the beach. Because of the Sunday starting time for the Hirt concert, the King Neptune Awards Ceremony has been moved forward from its original 5 p.m. start to 4:30 p.m.

Other schedule changes include a second day added to the Neptune Festival Volksmarsch, a family-style walking event over two courses of 10 and 20 kilometers. Volksmarsching was invented by American servicemen stationed in Germany as an overseas entertainment and fitness activity for families. Traditionally a two-day activity, the Neptune Festival Volksmarsch was previously scheduled as a one-day event until organizers were able to get approval to start the courses at the Pavilion Tower Hotel. Now the Volksmarsch will be run on Saturday and Sunday, September 22-23, starting at 7 a.m.

It was also announced that the Neptune Festival Golf Tournament at Hell's Point Golf Club, rated one of the best public golf courses in the country, will get underway a half hour earlier than originally planned. The tournament is now scheduled for 7:30 a.m. tee-off time on September 29.

Weaving display

The unique and unusual wheat weaving creations of Pam Goss will be on display during September in the Kempsville Area Library. Goss is an award winner of the 1984 Folk Arts Festival.

Ad moves those White Elephants

What's the best way to sell that white elephant you've got hanging around your neck? Try classified advertising in the Chesapeake Post, The Portsmouth Times and Virginia Beach Sun.

"I bought this lake lot in 1971 and had been trying to sell it for several years," reports delighted classified ad user Robert Duke of Nesoms, Va.

"I tried everything I could think of, lawyers, real estate agents, you name it. But no luck. Then I called the classified ad department and asked them to run an ad for the lot in all three Beyer Publications papers."

According to Duke, the response was "fantastic." And quick.

"I had several eager real estate agents to call me, and I had calls from individuals as far away as Maryland. I placed the lot with a real nice agent who had an office near the lake where my lot was. He sold the lot in about seven weeks for $1,500 more than I had advertised it for!"

"The classified ad gave the initial exposure I needed, and I could have never sold that hard-to-move lot without it."

Council approves payment of police defense legal $

Two Virginia Beach City Council members recently balked at paying a $6,000 legal fee incurred in the defense of a police officer charged with assault in the course of his duties.

The bill and another smaller one were approved for payment Monday afternoon by City Council.

The $6,000 bill represented legal fees in the defense of Officer William Daniel Barnette, charged with assault and found not guilty in civil court. Under the Code of Virginia, the city may reimburse officers for reasonable fees if he is found not guilty by the court or if the charge is dismissed.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan thought that the fee was excessive. She said this bill was "beyond reasonable."

City Attorney Dale Bimson said that the only guideline offered by his office is that the defendant request a local attorney. The fee was $100 an hour. Bimson said that attorney's fees in the Tidewater area range from $75 to $100 an hour.

Councilman Louis R. Jones said that he agreed that the fee seems high but that a service was performed and that no restraints were placed on the employee so the city has the responsibility to back up the officer.

Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr. and McClanahan voted against the $6,000 payment. Jennings said that his vote in no way indicates a reluctance to back up the police. He added that the city should have guidelines.

Councilman John A. Baum said he would rather have a good lawyer for $150 an hour than a jackleg one for $5.

McClanahan said she did not think Council should ask everybody in the city to pay for the lawyer.

Mayor Harold Hesichober said that if an officer is found guilty in such a case, the city could be held liable in a civil suit. He said the officers are entitled to the best defense.

Bimson explained that the selection of an attorney should be the officer's choice but a cap could be placed on the amount the city would agree to pay. He said, however, that in that case the attorney would have to guarantee a fee which he did not think many attorneys were willing to do.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf said that officers should know that the choice of an attorney is theirs but that they should discuss the fee ahead of time.

Councilman Robert G. Jones, an attorney, said the bill is reasonable. He said that five days of trial were involved, a tremendous amount of litigation.

The vote for approval was 8-2. Councilwoman Nancy Creech was absent.

Council also approved by a vote of 11-0 the reimbursement of $948 for legal fees for Charles D. Osborn, another police officer also charged with assault in the course of his duties and found not guilty by the General District Court.

the state. Included in the school fleet are specially designed and equipped buses for transporting students who have physical and mental handicaps which make it impractical for them to ride a regular school bus. The drivers of these vehicles receive special training particularly in loading and unloading of these students.

In addition, some regular buses which transport the more mobile handicapped students have driver aides to provide constant attention and care while the bus is in motion.

An experienced staff of maintenance men and women backs up the city's school bus drivers. A large, modern repair facility in the Oceana section enables them to handle any phase of bus repair or upkeep, from changing an engine to painting the exterior. Also, radio-dispatched repair vehicles provide emergency service each morning and afternoon should a school bus become disabled.

One hundred sixty-one of the school division's buses are equipped with the new pop-out "STOP" arm signs. The signs are located on the driver's side of the school bus and are activated by the driver when the bus is stopped loading or unloading children. The arm "pops out" from the side of the bus at about motorist eye level, which provides another means of warning traffic to stop. Their use has been called highly successful.

May Councilmanic election. A summer election was eliminated because of the added $50,000 cost for a special election and the possibility that many voters would be on vacation. This left the November General Election which was eliminated Monday evening.

In his remarks on polarization, R. Jones said that the morning following the Aug. 15 meeting he dropped into the mayor's office where there apparently was a reaffirming of the November referendum. He said the talk included references to "bold leadership," "accept the challenges," and "growing population," that the increase in taxes would not be so great as the benefits derived from the extra taxes. "Then I came in Monday and was rather shocked to find six members had changed their minds."

Baum said that he was referring to the polarization in the community. He said that he had not wanted to run for election again but that he had some compelling reasons and that he had been asked to by some con-

Baum conceded that some Council members voted too liberally on rezonings, and that part of the publicity Council has had has been bad. The rhetoric of one group is pitted against the other, he said.

Mayor Hesichober, explaining the morning after the Aug. 15 meeting, said that "some of what Mr. Jones has said is quite accurate," but that was before he had spoken to City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck and Superintendent of Schools E. E. Brickell. He said that the School Boards Capital Improvement Budget is not ready and won't be until after the end of September. He said that Muehlenbeck said that there would be no difficulty in delaying the referendum until January. He added that Muehlenbeck said that January, February and March were not the best months for construction. He also recommended that Barber make his requests to the School Board.

Colonial Williamsburg offers daily tours, discount ticket for handicapped visitors

By Susan Q. Bruno
WILLIAMSBURG—Handicapped persons visiting this restored colonial capital city of Virginia can now take advantage of two new options open to them at Colonial Williamsburg, including a 50 per cent reduction in ticket price.

The foundation now offers a daily tour that is completely accessible to handicapped visitors. The two-hour escorted tour of the 173-acre Historic Area begins at 2 p.m. from the Courthouse of 1770. The tour offers a general overview of 18th-century life here and includes visits to various exhibition buildings, craft shops and gardens.

Effective immediately, the price of the basic 13-admission ticket has been reduced by half for handicapped visitors to Colonial Williamsburg. The basic ticket usually sells for $12 for adults, $8 for youth aged 13 to 17 and $5 for children aged 6-12, with visitors under age 6 admitted free. Handicapped visitors can purchase the ticket for $6 for adults, $4 for youth and $2.50 for children. In addition to the limited building admissions, the ticket enables the bearer to view the orientation film, "Williamsburg: The Story of a Patriot," and ride for free the Colonial Williamsburg buses.

A handicapped person is defined as an individual with hearing, sight or ambulatory disability.

"A handicapped person obviously has limitations in what he or she can experience here. By reducing the price of the admission ticket for them, we feel the handicapped visitors will be paying a fair price for what they'll be getting," said William Suber, handicapped projects coordinator.
